200 Indians storm Parliament

Fierce battle disrupts ceremony

Honor guard fixes its bayonets

Both attempts failed but each time the Mounties and the Indians exchanged punches. There were numerous tussles on the ground; sticks, bricks and placards flew through the air.

Ottawa city police said Monday night that seven demonstrators had been charged with obstructing and assaulting police. Eighteen people originally detained had been released but "possibly more charges will be laid," a police spokesman said. He said three RCMP officers and possibly one demonstrator were injured.

Between the two clashes the Indians burned a Maple Leaf

By STEPHEN SCOTT

OTTAWA (CP) — The government will make a downpayment this session of Parliament on some of the promises it made during the July federal election campaign.

Indications are that the part of the promises that voters will see this session will be those that cost the least.

The throne speech read at the opening of Parliament Monday said that as far as new initiatives are concerned the government "will be conscious of the need for restraint and careful phasing in relation to the state of the economy."

In other words, don't look for government money pouring into a "superbus" for inter-city transportation or for that exclusive, tourist-oriented train that would chug across the country in daylight hours only.

Both came up in the election campaign with promises of subsidies and other forms of help in housing, only some of which will see the light of day in the relatively near future.

During the election campaign the Liberals made major promises in the area of housing, transport, old-age pensions, consumer protection

New authority faces headache despite budget

By JIM HUME
Colonist Reporter

The budget for the first year of operation of the newly created B.C. Assessment Authority has been set at $6.6 million, roughly $2.6 million higher than originally anticipated.

When legislation creating the authority was approved, an outright grant of $1.5 million each year for five years, and a grant equivalent to one tenth of a mill of the total value of all taxable assessed property in the province (approximately $2.5 million), was regarded as adequate financing.

An order-in-council issued Monday lists $5.7 million as the budget for assessment and clerical staffs, $875,000 for other office staff and $32,000 for accommodation and furnishings.

But whatever the budget it won't eliminate the headaches now facing the new organization.

Those problems begin officially today as Assessment Commissioner Percy Wright awaits replies to invitations to all municipal assessors throughout the province to join his staff.

Wright said he was hopeful that most municipal assessors would reply quickly and in the affirmative, but added that there would be problems in many smaller municipalities where assessors do double-duty in the municipal structure.

Joe Antalek, clerk-assessor of Pitt Meadows (pop. 4,000) near Haney, is typical of the small-town administrator now facing a crossroads in his career: Should he become one of 700 staff members working for the assessment authority? Or should he quietly decline Wright's invitation and remain with Pitt Meadows as clerk?

"I just don't know what I'm going to do," Antalek said in a telephone interview Monday, "and I don't suppose I'm alone. It's really the same old story of a government introducing legislation before studying the ramifications."

Legislation too soon

In the past, Antalek, like other small community clerk assessors, has brought his assessment roll as up to date as possible by "working till midnight every day in late November or early December."

This year he has called bids from firms of private appraisers and now has a low bid to send to the assessment authority, hopefully for approval.

"But even that creates problems for us," he said. "Like who will defend us at the court of revision? If there are only a few appeals, I guess I could maybe handle it. But if there are 200 or so, and there could be with assessments going to 100 per cent of true market value, I just don't know what we'll do."

Wright agrees that Antalek is not alone.

"I'm afraid the same situation will exist in most small communities like Pitt Meadows, Comox, Enderby, Armstrong, Greenwood and Fernie," Wright said. "There are many others, but these are all small communities where the assessor plays a double and sometimes triple role."

But while the smaller municipalities are going to be hit hardest as they have to find either a new assessor or a new municipal clerk before year-end, cities like Victoria have to gear for some juggling, too.

City assessor Jack Ozard noted that of the 11 members in the city's assessment department, eight were fairly solidly committed to joining the provincial authority.

"There will be some problems," Ozard said. "We have positions in city hall designated assessor-collector. That's where a man is both in charge of assessment rolls and in charge of collection rolls. Obviously, if he joins the assessment authority, the city will need someone to assume the collection duties."

Conversely, if the city employee decides to stay with the city as a collector, the assessment authority will have to find another assessor to make up the complement of trained appraisers required to handle the assessment load.

City Manager James Bramley said he didn't anticipate any major problems in the switch-over, officially scheduled for today but now anticipated by month-end.

Cyprus backlash

Senators vote no Turkey aid

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate voted Monday to cut off military aid to Turkey, but killed an attempt to ban all U.S. aid to the world's exporting countries.

The Senate approved an amendment by Sen. Thomas Eagleton, Missouri Democrat, that would prohibit aid to any country using U.S. weapons in violation of laws governing their use. The Senate was reacting to Turkey's invasion of Cyprus.

Earlier the Senate, by 46 to 33, killed an amendment by Sen. Frank Church, Idaho Democrat, to deny any aid to the oil-exporting countries in retaliation for huge oil price increases set by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

The Eagleton amendment to the pending continuing resolution on foreign aid won overwhelming approval despite arguments by Democratic leader Mike Mansfield that the Senate should not interfere with Cyprus negotiations being undertaken by Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

"The secretary has been warned," Eagleton said, "that the letter and the spirit of American law require an immediate cutoff of military assistance to Turkey, which more than two months ago violated its bilateral arms agreement with the United States by using American weapons to intervene in Cyprus."

Grain companies reject Munro

VANCOUVER (CP)—A legislated settlement of the Vancouver grain handlers strike appeared certain today after elevator companies rejected Monday the latest settlement proposal by Labor Minister John Munro.

The government said in its throne speech that legislation would be passed to ensure movement of grain if the parties did not resolve the dispute.

Munro sent telegrams to the five elevator companies and the 550-member local 333 of the Grain Workers Union outlining two proposals that might end the dispute which has lingered since Aug. 26.

Union business agent Henry Kancs said the union accepted the proposals but R. W. Mead, chief negotiator for the companies, rejected them.

Mead said the proposal is the same as the companies rejected two weeks ago and an end to the strike "will have to be legislated."

Munro said only two items in the conciliation report by Dr. Neil Perry of Victoria remain in dispute—a cost-of-living allowance and pension proposals.

Munro suggested the pension issue might be resolved on the basis of company contributions of 25 cents per man-hour worked plus $20,000 to be made by the firms into a pension fund annually in 1974 to 1978 inclusive.

The cost-of-living allowances should be based on the Perry report with an understanding between the parties that overlapping of adjustments would be avoided, the minister said.

Mead said the companies accepted the pension proposals but don't want the cost-of-living clause to go into effect until next year.

Slight signs of cancer

WASHINGTON (UPI) Betty Ford's doctors reported Monday they found slight traces of cancer cells in the president's wife's lymph tissue, but said there was no clinical evidence the disease had spread further.

The surgeons said they remain optimistic for Mrs. Ford's "prolonged survival."

Throne speech lacks surprises

Government spending will keep low profile

OTTAWA (CP) — With well-rehearsed ceremonial rituals Parliament opened Monday and heard that the government plans to restrain its spending in the battle against inflation.

The throne speech opening the new Parliament acknowledged inflation to be a "serious and urgent" problem.

Long after Prime Minister Trudeau had said inflation had been licked, the speech made it clear that the main battle lies ahead.

"For its part, the government will exercise restraint in its own expenditures with particular emphasis on improving effectiveness and efficiency in its existing operation . . ."

But "the government does not intend deliberately to generate slack in the economy in order to combat inflation."

Conservative leader Robert Stanfield said "there was really nothing surprising in the speech from the throne" except that inflation now seems to be recognized as a major problem by the Liberal government.

Ed Broadbent, New Democratic Party parliamentary leader, said there are indications the government may follow a deflationary policy, despite its explicit promise not to generate slack in the economy.

Social Credit leader Real Caouette said he has heard 16 throne speeches and Monday's seemed "an exact copy" of the first one.

Detailed stories Pages 2, 10

The speech, read by Chief Justice Bora Laskin, indicated a heavy schedule of federal-provincial meetings, and consultations with labor, management, the professions, farmers and other segments of society as the government launches a co-operative attack on inflation.

"The government does intend to ask all Canadians to join with it in a co-operative effort to achieve by non-inflationary means an equitable sharing among all groups in the community of the fruits of our productive efforts.

"Canada has thus far suffered less from inflation than most other countries, but the problem is serious and urgent."

Bylaw provides target, birds don't

By DON GAIN
Colonist Reporter

Jeremy Tatum thinks Saanich police will have problems in applying a new bylaw that allows them to shoot Japanese starlings and magpies.

Main problem, he says, is that there aren't any on Vancouver Island.

Tatum, a professional astronomer who is past president of Victoria Natural History Society, takes exception to police killing any birds, even ones that don't exist here.

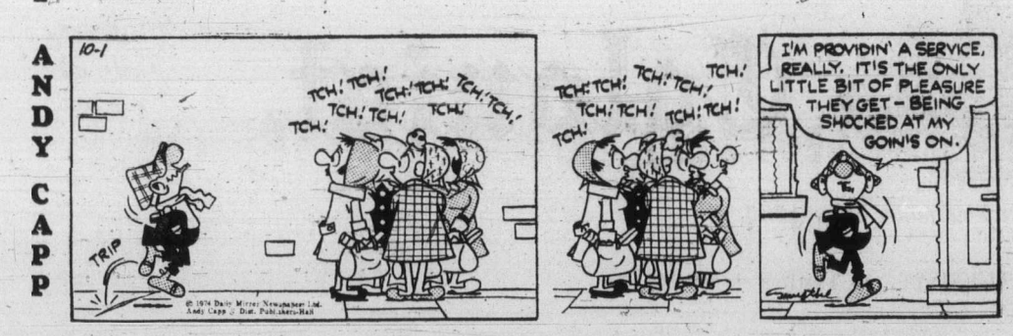

"If some are in competition with man, attacking agriculture or presenting a danger to aircraft, that's another story," he says.

But he's concerned about Saanich aldermen "passing legislation on things they know nothing whatever about."

Tatum says their ignorance is obvious because the new bylaw allows police or property owners with official permission — to shoot Japanese starlings and magpies, along with English sparrows, crows and English starlings.

What made them decide that? he wants to know. Did they study the bird population?

Tatum says he doubts the worth of the bylaw, since there is in fact no such thing as a Japanese starling, although sometimes the name is given to the crested mynah, which has never been spotted in this area. And he says there are no records of magpies on Vancouver Island, either.

OTTAWA (CP)—Health Minister Marc Lalonde says he plans to introduce legislation within the next month to change the country's cannabis laws.

Cannabis (marijuana and hashish) will be switched from the Narcotics Control Act to the Federal Food and Drugs Act, Lalonde said Monday in an interview following the throne speech.

The drugs act now covers prescription drugs as well as controlled and restricted drugs like amphetamines and the LSD hallucinogens.

Lalonde said the legislation would set out in detail how cannabis would be controlled and what exact penalties would be imposed.

It is expected the proposed changes will mean cannabis possession will no longer be punishable by jail sentences although the offence will be subject to fines.

Penalties for trafficking, importing and cultivation are expected to remain stiff.

The legislative changes will do little, however, to alter the current practice in most courtrooms. Although first offenders in cannabis possession cases can be sent to jail, the courts usually impose only fines.

The proposed cannabis changes were announced more than two years ago by then Health Minister John Munro following publication of one of the Le Dain Royal Commission reports calling for more liberal cannabis laws.

Since he became health minister almost two years ago, Lalonde has said several times that the cannabis legislation was imminent. This time he gave a "personal commitment" that the legislation would be introduced in the Commons during October.

The throne speech, which didn't mention the cannabis legislation, promised government action generally in the health field. It said emphasis would be placed "on the prevention of illness, which includes raising the level of physical fitness of Canadians."

Lalonde also said the 65-year-old Proprietary or Patent Medicine Act will soon be placed under the Food and Drugs Act.

He gave no details, but the secrecy provision in the patent medicine act allowing manufacturers to market non-prescription drugs without telling the buyer what's in them has been under review in the health department.

Ottawa will promote search for new oil

The government outlined a mixture of old and new proposals in the throne speech it hopes will increase the search for new petroleum supplies.

Bills setting up a national petroleum corporation and giving the government authority to collect an export tax on crude oil will be reintroduced, the speech said. Both measures died when Parliament was dissolved for the July 8 election.

But the government also promised steps to ensure that oil and gas prices are regulated "in a manner which will encourage necessary exploration and development in Canada."

Energy Minister Donald Macdonald said outside the house that the first steps came last week when he announced a 67 per cent increase in the price of gas exported to the United States.

Increases in domestic prices also are expected, but the amount has not yet been announced, the minister said. Discussions with the producing provinces were continuing.

Macdonald said the government still plans to bring the price of gas in stages up to the level of an equivalent amount of oil.

It hoped the higher gas prices would lead to greater exploration efforts by the petroleum countries.

But the government's plans drew some sharp criticism from opposition parties.

Action on jobless in 'near future'

OTTAWA (CP) — Amendments to the Unemployment Insurance Act promised in the throne speech Monday will be introduced in the House of Commons "fairly shortly," a spokesman for the Unemployment Insurance Commission said.

The proposals had been promised in the throne speech delivered last winter, but the July 8 federal election prevented their introduction into Parliament.

The UIC spokesman said Monday the changes will "encourage rapid re-entry of the unemployed into the labor force and make the program more flexible and responsive to regional differences."

Last spring, during the election campaign Manpower Minister Robert Andras said the proposed amendments would discourage persons from quitting jobs casually or refusing "suitable" work by increasing the disqualification period in such cases to eight weeks from five.

Shady selling spiels will draw federal fire

OTTAWA (CP) — The government promised Monday to provide consumers with limited protection against shady selling techniques, misleading loan interest rates and potentially-dangerous electrical products.

But it fell short of July 8 election pledges to shield average Canadians from what Prime Minister Trudeau called the jungle of lending and credit provisions that now favor the fortunate.

The government also gave notice that it plans to keep the food prices review board in action for another year, ending speculation that the 1½-year-old board would be abandoned when its mandate expired in December, this year.

Your good health

By George C. Thosteson, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Can bedsores be cured? Is it best to keep them moist or dry? My mother has had one for several months. It is located at the end of her spine. — Mrs. W.W.

Bedsores are the result of continuous pressure. They result, not only from lying in one position for too long, but also from moisture, also from poor nutrition and poor circulation which occur naturally in the bedridden patient.

The scores can be prevented by the simple expedient of moving the patient onto his side from time to time and by keeping the weight-bearing areas, such as the spine, clean and dry. Leakage of urine and stool should be avoided.

If a red spot begins to show, infrared light treatment can help prevent its spreading. That is, infrared for short periods — not ultra-violet. Heat from a gooseneck lamp placed about two feet above the skin helps also.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I read about the lady who washes her hands with soap and water after doing the dishes, to prevent getting a detergent rash. Yes, I have been doing this for some time now and it works for me. My hands had never given me any trouble until the last few years. When it did start, I tried washing my hands after doing the dishes and it does work. — Mrs. V.J.

And I've heard from some others who said it didn't work for them, and they have to wear gloves. Best I can say is, try it. If it works for you, that's fine.

Opposition rams throne speech

Housing glue too thin

OTTAWA (CP) — A government housing package designed to ease the housing crisis was unwrapped in the throne speech Monday, disclosing items from the defeated May budget and the Liberal election platform.

Opposition spokesmen said the government housing plan will do nothing to relieve the housing shortage.

Ed Broadbent, parliamentary leader of the New Democratic Party, and Sinclair Stevens (PC—York Simcoe) said the government should have stepped in with a massive program to increase housing supply.

The throne speech refers to additional assistance for buyers of moderately-priced housing and government sources said this includes the $500 home purchase grant for first-time home buyers. It also included government insurance of conventional lenders under the Assisted Home-Ownership Program.

Broadbent said the government promise to continue asking mortgage lenders to provide low down payments for moderately-priced housing is a "very clear indication of the weakness of the whole mortgage policy." Without teeth, this would not enable the government to compel lenders to follow these guides.

Stevens said the government proposal to increase the supply of land for housing is a motherhood statement. The government should say specifically that it will launch a massive program of providing serviced land for housing, he said.

Nothing short of a giant program bringing thousands of acres of land into the housing market would suffice, he said.

The government will continue pressing financial institutions to direct all low down payment loans to moderately-priced housing, the throne speech said.

It also will bring back the registered home owner's savings plan which died with the Commons defeat of the Liberal government's budget last May. The plan, as outlined in the May budget, would allow a tax deduction of savings up to $1,000 a year for every person planning to buy a home.

Spouses will receive old-age pensions early

OTTAWA (CP) — The government intends to pay old-age pensions to spouses, aged 60 to 65, of persons who are already receiving the pensions, the throne speech said Monday.

The extension of the pensions was promised by the Liberals during the July 8 federal election campaign and is one of several social security reforms listed in the speech.

The promised pension payments will begin in October, 1975, the speech said.

At present, the old-age pensions, paid to all persons 65 or over who meet residence requirements, are $117.02 a month. Guaranteed income supplements can add as much as another $82.08 for single persons or married persons whose spouses are not pensioners.

The pensions are raised four times a year, with raises based on increases in the cost-of-living index.

The throne speech also promised steps would be taken to "eliminate certain hardships" for Canadians away from the country for limited periods.

Under the existing law, Canadians who have not lived in the country for 25 years beyond their twenty-first birthday, may have their pensions cut off if they leave Canada for longer than six months.

Increases in war veterans allowances were also promised.

The throne speech also outlined proposals that have already been agreed to in the social security review that is now underway between the federal and provincial governments.

Canada Pension Plan amendments to change the income base upon which contributions are made will be introduced, the throne speech said.

Energy Minister Donald Macdonald said outside the house that the first steps came last week when he announced a 67 per cent increase in the price of gas exported to the United States.

Increases in domestic prices also are expected, but the amount has not yet been announced, the minister said. Discussions with the producing provinces were continuing.

Macdonald said the government still plans to bring the price of gas in stages up to the level of an equivalent amount of oil.

It hoped the higher gas prices would lead to greater exploration efforts by the petroleum countries.

But the government's plans drew some sharp criticism from opposition parties.

Action on jobless in 'near future'

OTTAWA (CP) — Amendments to the Unemployment Insurance Act promised in the throne speech Monday will be introduced in the House of Commons "fairly shortly," a spokesman for the Unemployment Insurance Commission said.

The proposals had been promised in the throne speech delivered last winter, but the July 8 federal election prevented their introduction into Parliament.

The UIC spokesman said Monday the changes will "encourage rapid re-entry of the unemployed into the labor force and make the program more flexible and responsive to regional differences."

Last spring, during the election campaign Manpower Minister Robert Andras said the proposed amendments would discourage persons from quitting jobs casually or refusing "suitable" work by increasing the disqualification period in such cases to eight weeks from five.

Shady selling spiels will draw federal fire

OTTAWA (CP) — The government promised Monday to provide consumers with limited protection against shady selling techniques, misleading loan interest rates and potentially-dangerous electrical products.

But it fell short of July 8 election pledges to shield average Canadians from what Prime Minister Trudeau called the jungle of lending and credit provisions that now favor the fortunate.

The government also gave notice that it plans to keep the food prices review board in action for another year, ending speculation that the 1½-year-old board would be abandoned when its mandate expired in December, this year.

By George C. Thosteson, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Can bedsores be cured? Is it best to keep them moist or dry? My mother has had one for several months. It is located at the end of her spine. — Mrs. W.W.

Bedsores are the result of continuous pressure. They result, not only from lying in one position for too long, but also from moisture, also from poor nutrition and poor circulation which occur naturally in the bedridden patient.

The scores can be prevented by the simple expedient of moving the patient onto his side from time to time and by keeping the weight-bearing areas, such as the spine, clean and dry. Leakage of urine and stool should be avoided.

If a red spot begins to show, infrared light treatment can help prevent its spreading. That is, infrared for short periods — not ultra-violet. Heat from a gooseneck lamp placed about two feet above the skin helps also.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I read about the lady who washes her hands with soap and water after doing the dishes, to prevent getting a detergent rash. Yes, I have been doing this for some time now and it works for me. My hands had never given me any trouble until the last few years. When it did start, I tried washing my hands after doing the dishes and it does work. — Mrs. V.J.

And I've heard from some others who said it didn't work for them, and they have to wear gloves. Best I can say is, try it. If it works for you, that's fine.

Opposition rams throne speech

Housing glue too thin

OTTAWA (CP) — A government housing package designed to ease the housing crisis was unwrapped in the throne speech Monday, disclosing items from the defeated May budget and the Liberal election platform.

Opposition spokesmen said the government housing plan will do nothing to relieve the housing shortage.

Ed Broadbent, parliamentary leader of the New Democratic Party, and Sinclair Stevens (PC—York Simcoe) said the government should have stepped in with a massive program to increase housing supply.

The throne speech refers to additional assistance for buyers of moderately-priced housng and government sources said this includes the $500 home purchase grant for first-time home buyers. It also included government insurance of conventional lenders under the Assisted Home-Ownership Program.

Broadbent said the government promise to continue asking mortgage lenders to provide low down payments for moderately-priced housing is a "very clear indication of the weakness of the whole mortgage policy." Without teeth, this would not enable the government to compel lenders to follow these guides.

Stevens said the government proposal to increase the supply of land for housing is a motherhood statement. The government should say specifically that it will launch a massive program of providing serviced land for housing, he said.

Nothing short of a giant program bringing thousands of acres of land into the housing market would suffice, he said.

The government will continue pressing financial institutions to direct all low down payment loans to moderately-priced housing, the throne speech said.

It also will bring back the registered home owner's savings plan which died with the Commons defeat of the Liberal government's budget last May. The plan, as outlined in the May budget, would allow a tax deduction of savings up to $1,000 a year for every person planning to buy a home.

Spouses will receive old-age pensions early

OTTAWA (CP) — The government intends to pay old-age pensions to spouses, aged 60 to 65, of persons who are already receiving the pensions, the throne speech said Monday.

The extension of the pensions was promised by the Liberals during the July 8 federal election campaign and is one of several social security reforms listed in the speech.

The promised pension payments will begin in October, 1975, the speech said.

At present, the old-age pensions, paid to all persons 65 or over who meet residence requirements, are $117.02 a month. Guaranteed income supplements can add as much as another $82.08 for single persons or married persons whose spouses are not pensioners.

The throne speech also promised steps would be taken to "eliminate certain hardships" for Canadians away from the country for limited periods.

Under the existing law, Canadians who have not lived in the country for 25 years beyond their twenty-first birthday, may have their pensions cut off if they leave Canada for longer than six months.

Increases in war veterans allowances were also promised.

The throne speech also outlined proposals that have already been agreed to in the social security review that is now underway between the federal and provincial governments.

Canada Pension Plan amendments to change the income base upon which contributions are made will be introduced, the throne speech said.

Meet Miss moneybags, the artful dodger

CHICAGO (UPI) — For Linda Taylor, welfare cheques are a way of life. They help her pay bills on her 1974 Cadillac, Lincoln and Chevy station wagon, the four buildings she claims to own on the South Side, and anything else her lifestyle has helped her to own.

Two police burglary unit detectives, Jack Sherwin and Jerry Kush, stumbled onto Miss Taylor and her extraordinary network of names, addresses, phone numbers and husbands when she came into the station Aug. 8 to report a $14,000 apartment theft that police believe never happened.

A fingerprinting revealed that Miss Taylor, 47, had tried a similar theft report in 1972 and that she was wanted in Michigan for welfare fraud. Because of that warrant, extradition proceedings are underway.

"She is a small person with nondescript features," Kush said. "Her skin is sallow — like a medium yellow — and she has no features that make her peculiar to any racial background. So she passes as a Filipino. She puts on a black wig and becomes a Negro and with other makeup and wigs, she passes for white."

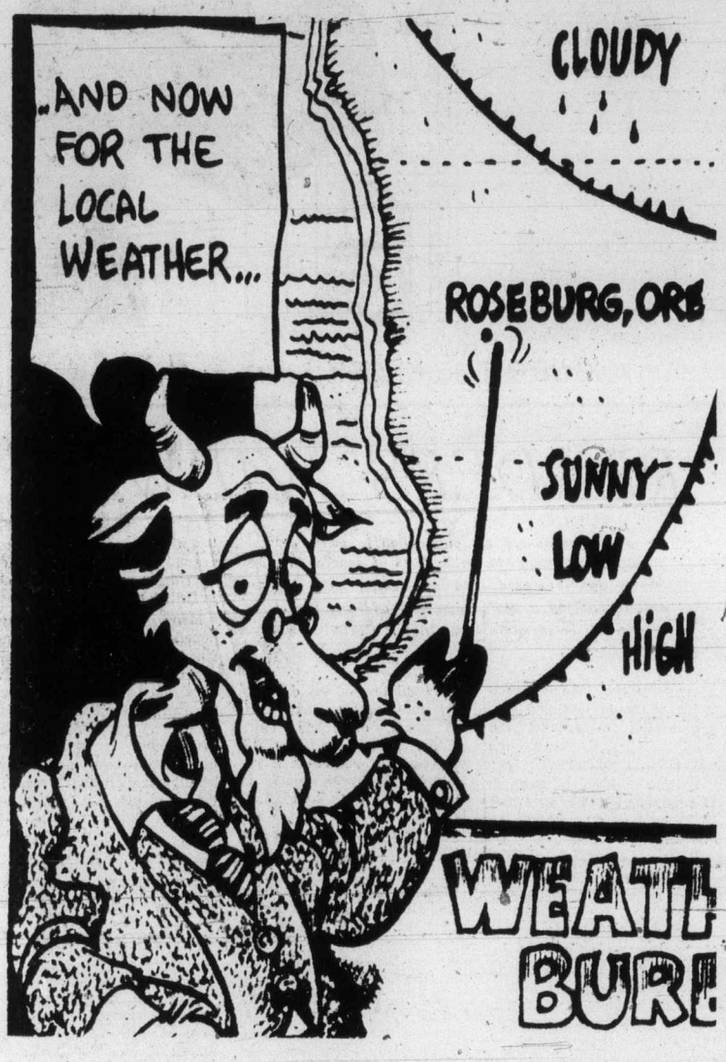

Kush said during their month-long investigation, they discovered Miss Taylor receives welfare cheque and food stamps at two different addresses and under two different names, that she has at least 27 aliases, uses 31 addresses, has 25 different phone numbers, has three social security cards, and owns stocks and bonds under a variety of names.

She claims to have had several husbands — all now dead, and was married last month to a sailor at Great Lakes Naval Training Centre who is 26 years her junior.

"She poses as a doctor or a registered nurse or as a business agent representing various firms," Kush said. "Our records trace her back to 1967 but she was first arrested when she was 19 or 20 for theft in Seattle."

Sherwin and Kush's investigations have spurred a probe of welfare abuse by the state legislative advisory commission on public aid, a powerful state committee.

In addition to Miss Taylor's own abuses, evidence indicates she may have been part of a well-organized scheme involving welfare cheaters and state public aid employes bilking the welfare system.

Leftist leaders oust de Spinola as crowd chants death to CIA

LISBON (AP) — Young leftist military leaders forced Gen. Antonio de Spinola to quit as Portugal's president Monday and three left-leaning military officers began running the country.

In his last television address as president, Spinola warned that, with the government's sharp swing to the left, Portugal was sliding into "chaos and anarchy" and that "new forms of slavery are being prepared."

The Communists and Socialists organized mass demonstrations Monday night in downtown Lisbon as about 20,000 people chanted "death to the CIA," "long live the new president" and "long live the provisional government."

An announcement by the Junta of National Salvation, which had engineered the coup last April that brought Spinola to power, said Army Gen. Francisco da Costa Gomez will assume the presidency and rule with two navy captains, who are staunch leftists.

Despite the internal changes, Portugal is not expected to alter its foreign policy significantly.

U.S. going to pot:senator

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Chairman James Eastland of the U.S. Senate internal security subcommittee said Monday if the current rate of marijuana use continues, Americans may find themselves "saddled with a large population of semi-zombies."

Eastland said information supplied to his panel suggests the validity of estimates that 35 million Americans have used marijuana at some time, with more than 10 million regular users.

"If the cannabis epidemic continues to spread at the rate of the post-Berkeley period (since 1965), we may find ourselves saddled with a large population of semi-zombies — of young people acutely afflicted by the amotivational syndrome," he said.

Arabs threaten cut in oil supply again

United Press International

The Arab states will shut off oil supplies again to western states supporting Israel if current diplomatic efforts do not produce a just settlemest of the Middle East conflict, the Arab oil workers federation said Monday in Cairo.

Taking a different tack, Algeria's government-controlled El Moudjahid newspaper in Algiers said the United States might follow up its demand for a rollback of oil prices by invading oil-producing countries.

Elsewhere:

● In Wellington, New Zealand, the Shah of Iran warned industrialized nations they would come off second best in a showdown with world oil producers. He urged the United States to start exploiting more of its own energy resources that he said were idle.

● Venezuela will probably decree a "moderate increase" today in taxes paid by American and other foreign oil companies operating there, authoritative official sources said Monday. It should give Venezuela additional oil revenue of about $230 million.

● The Kuwaiti government said it was in favor of a compromise solution to the world oil problem that would satisfy both oil-producing and oil-consuming states and establish links between the prices of foodstuffs and petroleum.

● President Ford's economic advisers are discussing proposals to tax gasoline 10 cents a gallon and to place a heavy tax on the excessive use of other fuels such as natural gas and oil.

● President Ford said inflation has gone far beyond levels that the world can tolerate, and pledged the United States to help solve the problem through co-operation in trade, monetary policy and other means.

● Shoppers in the U.S. can expect to see food prices rise another 8 to 10 per cent by the end of next year. Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz said that increase would come on top of the 12 per cent food price hike already registered this year.

● In Tokyo, sharp hikes in the price of many daily necessities and essential public services go into effect today, possibly triggering another inflationary spiral in Japan's already-inflated economy.

WORLD in BRIEF

FBI holds man after Winnipeg mail bomb blast

VANCOUVER (CP) — FBI investigators in Portland, Ore., are holding a suspect in last week's mail bombing in Winnipeg which blew off the hand of a court official.

An FBI spokesman said in a telephone interview Monday from Portland a 50-year-old man was turned over to American immigration authorities after he was picked up Sunday.

Albert Conversano, a U.S. immigration officer, said the suspect could be prosecuted for entering the U.S. illegally, he could be deported or could return to Canada voluntarily.

South Africa on griddle

UNITED NATIONS (CP)) — Canada, while condemning South Africa's racial policies, vigorously opposed in the General Assembly on Monday a move by a group of African states to oust the big white-ruled republic from the United Nations. Canadian Ambassador Saul Rae said any step to isolate South Africa would only "reduce our chances of success in modifying" its policies.

Acupuncture misses point

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Acupuncture treatment for deafness brought no significant gains in hearing for 41 patients, according to a new study announced Monday. In one of the first extensive studies in the U.S. of patients treated at acupuncture clinics, two audiology experts at Temple University said their study offers little hope from the ancient Chinese medical art of treatment with needles.

The next time you turn on your colour TV, go up to the screen with the magnifying glass, and take a close look at what's really making up that colour picture you're looking at. Dots. Red, blue and green dots. If the dots are kind of blurry, they're coming at you through a white matrix.

And we can tell you right now that your set is at least 5 years old. Because the black matrix improvement has been around about that long. Colours against a black background will always stand out much better than colours against a white background.

So maybe it's time for a new colour TV.

When you do decide to go shopping take the magnifying glass with you.

When the salesman turns a set on, go through the same procedure.

Examine the screen up close with the glass. The dots look much clearer now, because they're coming through a black matrix. Now stand back and look at the picture. You may be so impressed with the brilliance (as compared with what you've been seeing at home), that you'll start getting out your chequebook right then and there.

Drop in to any Toshiba dealer.

And don't forget the magnifying glass. Go right up to the screen with the glass, as soon as the salesman turns on the 14" screen C-335. While he's talking about 100% solid state dependability, plug-in modules for easy servicing, Automatic Fine Tuning and Automatic Balance Control, you study what's happened inside the colour. Black background for definition, you've seen that already. But, the dots aren't dots any longer. They're stripes of colour. And it doesn't take a lot of thought to realize there's more colour area in a stripe than in a dot.

Now stand back and look. That's called Toshiba Blackstripe™ colour television. It's $500 worth of colour if ever you saw it. And for only $479.95 (suggested retail).

RICHARD BOWER — Publisher and Editor-in-Chief

A sudden urgency

THE GOVERNMENT OF CANADA has finally responded, although in a somewhat uncertain voice, to the insistent demand from every section of the national community for action to restrain galloping inflation.

Until the Throne Speech disclosure yesterday of Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau's changed attitude, he had refused to recognize the fact of inflation.

He had shrugged away the alarming cost of living increase with the explanation that it was a natural result of burgeoning economy.

But the Throne Speech — which is really the prime minister's statement of program and policy — grants that inflation is suddenly a problem, "serious and urgent."

The government will not deliberately generate slack in the economy to combat this inflation, it is promised, but "does intend to ask all Canadians to join with it in a co-operative effort to achieve by non-inflationary means an equitable sharing among all groups in the community . . . There must be a greater awareness of the need for restraint by everyone."

Restraint is something the Opposition has been urging ever since Mr. Trudeau first was elected to his high office.

It is a policy apparently accepted at the urging of Finance Minister John Turner, who has gone so far as to suggest it would be unwise, if not impossible, to implement some of the Liberal Party's more prodigal promises made during the last election campaign.

The emphasis, it seems, will be on the improvement of "effectiveness and efficiency in the existing operations" while controlling expansion of new government activities which might contribute to the inflationary pressures.

The Throne Speech supports the pre-session assurances given by Mr. Turner that the government wanted to set a good example in its spending habits.

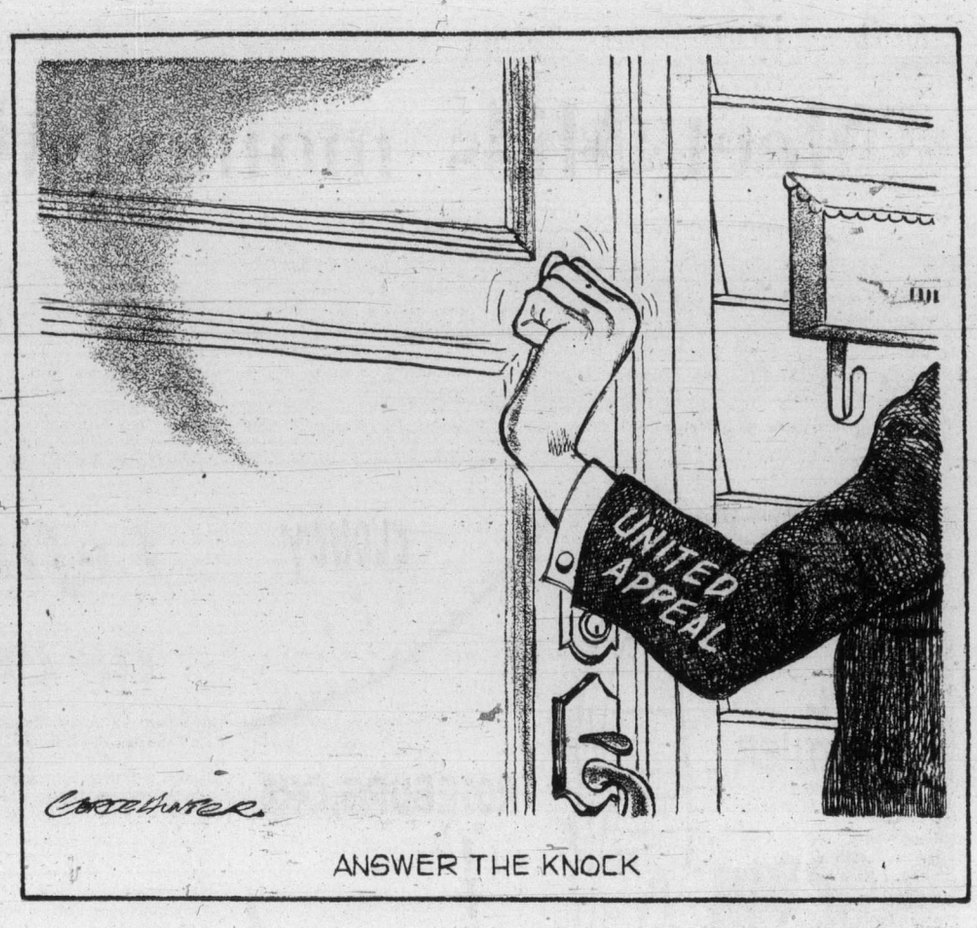

This would be an admirable if an unlikely achievement.

Encouragement is promised the farmer and the fishermen for an increase in production, which is a good thing as long as it does not lead to such scandalous waste as that attributed to mismanagement of the affairs of the national Egg Marketing Agency. And proposals to help the home-buyer will be welcomed, particularly in B.C. where lumber production could be stimulated as a consequence and loggers could once again find full employment.

It is reassuring, too, that the government intends to protect Canada's uranium reserves, as the Throne Speech confirms, and Energy Minister Donald Macdonald announced a month ago. There will always be a 30-year supply for nuclear reactors, he said.

On the whole the government's statement of intention is hardly more than humdrum, incorporating most of the budget proposals made by Mr. Turner last July, a document on which the government was defeated.

For those who believe in government promises of drastic economies the Throne Speech will be happily received. But then such people must also believe in fairies.

Mr. Whelan cuts the cackle

SINCE THE SCANDALOUS mismanagement in the Canadian egg marketing organization was disclosed in August, for which Canadians have to thank the chairman of the Food Prices Review Board, Mrs. Beryl Plumptre, there has been some rapid shifting in postures and policies.

In mid-September Ottawa lifted the restrictions on the importing of U.S. eggs because, with the protection of the producer rather than the consumer always in mind, the price was higher than it had been.

Federal marketing experts explained that because of the increase in American egg costs the Canadian Egg Marketing Agency "can go ahead and raise its price for eggs with no worries about U.S. competition."

At the same time Saskatchewan eggs suddenly appeared on the B.C. market, selling for 85 cents a dozen Grade A large compared with the home-laid 97 cents variety.

The B.C. Egg Marketing Board immediately cut its price by 14 cents to meet this competition, and poultrymen said it would put them out of business.

In another rare show of concern for the shopper, B.C. Consumer Affairs Minister Phyllis Young decided to allow sale of cracked eggs to people who want them. And apparently many do because they are 22 cents a dozen cheaper than any other. The supply, however, is limited.

Then, amid reports of the second shipment of Newfoundland eggs in two days having to be buried in Vancouver and paid for by the federal marketing agency — making a total of 36,000 dozen — Consumer Affairs Minister Young hit upon what she considers a solution of the whole sorry mess: powdered eggs.

And because of all the bungling, she also wants the B.C. government to withdraw from any association with the national egg marketing agency.

But the most significant development of all was in Ottawa.

Eugene Whelan, the federal agriculture minister, who refused to admit any fault on the part of the egg marketing agency in the spoiling of something like 38 million eggs improperly stored, has suddenly changed his mind and demanded a full inquiry in this bureaucratic area.

He appears to have been convinced that something is amiss by reports that a Toronto exporter who tried to buy 50 million eggs for delivery in Austria was turned away by the national agency because the price was too low.

"I don't think the truth has been told by hardly anyone at all," says Mr. Whelan.

Quite so.

And neither has anyone apologized to Mrs. Plumptre for Mr. Whelan's remarks about her irresponsibility in criticizing the egg marketing agency for waste and inefficiency and the implication that she is, at $40,000 a year, nothing but an expensive and meddlesome nuisance.

OUR READERS' VIEWS

To be considered for publication in whole or in part, letters must be on subjects of general interest, and if signed with pen-names, must be accompanied by writer's name and address. Preference will be given to those that are brief.

Child support

The article about Mayor Frank Ney of Nanaimo sparked a special interest of mine.

I agree that single parents have severe financial problems and that a special program would certainly prove beneficial to society at large.

However, I wonder how many single parents have ex-spouses who neglect to pay child support as ruled by the Supreme Court of Canada?

I moved to British Columbia five months ago to get my children and myself away from the emotional strain of two families with the same father living in the same small town. This move was welcomed by my ex-husband and his second wife. He earns $20,000 per annum and she earns over $10,000, but since my move I have not received a single payment. Court procedures are lengthy, costly and in most cases ineffective.

Why should the people of British Columbia be taxed to supplement the income of single parents when there are spouses not living up to their responsibilities?

May I suggest the federal government put some muscle into the existing laws. There is a desperate need of thousands being ignored.

NAME WITHHELD.

Recycle

I am shocked by the remarks of Alderman Noel of Saanich regarding the recycling depot at Borden Street as recorded in September 25 Colonist. We certainly should not "clamp down" on this operation; instead we should do everything we can to encourage and aid this very worthwhile and necessary depot. Until the municipalities can provide a more suitable location the rent on the depot should not be increased.

I have been at the depot many times, and I have not noticed any undue untidiness; particulary I have never seen broken glass outside the building. If the sound of breaking glass disturbs nearby residents, it should then be a simple matter to restrict the hours at which this part of the operation is conducted.

I have written to Saanich Council, and I suggest that every supporter of recycle do the same.

M. SHARCOTT,

Solitude

We have done some checking and find there are now 11 marinas on Saanich Peninsula bays—Deep Cove, Canoe Cove, Blue Heron Bay, Shoal Bay, Brentwood Bay, the B.C. Ferry facilities at Swartz Bay and the large ocean institute scheduled for Patricia Bay. Can we not afford to leave one "for the birds"? The ducks and shore birds need the marshes and estuaries as much as we need our farmland. (The powers that be did have enough common sense to salvage some of that in the nick of time.) As well as the Indian claims, which are indeed legitimate, who is speaking for the rights of the wild creatures?

Quoting from the Sand County Almanac:

"Barring love and war, few enterprises are undertaken with such abandon or by such diverse individuals, or with so paradoxical a mixture of appetite and altruism, as that group of avocations known as outdoor recreation. It is, by common consent, a good thing for people to get back to nature. But wherein lies the goodness, and what can be done to encourage its pursuit? On these questions there is confusion of counsel, and only the most uncritical minds are free from doubt . . . Recreation is commonly spoken of as an economic resource. Governments tell us how many millions the public spends in its pursuit. It is clear without further discussion that mass-use involves a direct dilution of the opportunity for solitude, that when we speak of roads, campgrounds, toilets, etc. as 'development' of recreational resources, we speak falsely in respect to this component. Such accommodation for the crowd is not developing in the sense of adding or creating anything . . .

"The natural processes by which the land and the living things upon it have achieved their characteristic forms we call 'evolution' and by which they maintain their existence 'ecology'. That thing called 'nature study' despite the shiver it brings to the spines of the elect, constitutes the first embryonic groping of the mass-mind toward perception."

Let us leave a few islands of sanity amid the noise and tumult of these times, such as Saanichton Bay.

Falcons

A front page story in The Daily Colonist of September 24 shows a photograph of a man clutching a captive peregrine falcon, and highlights one of the most pressing conservation issues of our times. That is, the burning, fanatical desire by people to capture, train and breed in captivity some of the rarest birds in this continent in the name of "conservation."

For years the peregrine falcon has been the victim of two great dangers which have threatened its existence, namely DDT and the falconer. The DDT danger is now much reduced, but the falconers remain and, under the guise of "captive breeding programs," ostensibly designed "to save the species from extinction," these people are systematically robbing the young from the nests of these magnificent birds. No one knows how many hundreds of these birds have now been taken for these programs, but it was quite predictable that, as actually happened, the few birds raised in captivity and released into the wild would either die or be lost.

Fortunately the capture of birds of prey for falconry is illegal in most parts of Canada, but it is actively encouraged by our own B.C. Fish and Wildlife Branch which regards falconry as the "second highest beneficial use of the resource" (Fish and Wildife Circular 833, 1974). There is tremendous pressure on our birds of prey from persons who capture them for pets, and many of the birds used in the abortive so-called "captive propagation programs" in the United States have been robbed from nests in British Columbia.

Meng, the falconer mentioned in the article, is wrong when he states the "people just don't care." They do care very much that he, and other falconers in British Columbia, should be permitted by our government to take these birds from their nests. The headline stated that "man is the worst problem." He is indeed.

Responsible

Regarding the article in your paper dated Sept. 20, which is headed "Traditional Funeral Rites Fade," it is surprising that apparently all of the persons interviewed failed to make any reference to the Memorial Society of B.C., which is largely responsible for this trend.

The primary purpose of our society is the promotion of greater dignity and simplicity in funeral rites as opposed to the ostentatious display which is often a feature of funeral ceremonies. Our society is by far the largest in Canada, and its effectiveness is indicated by the fact that the average cost for funerals in Victoria was $414 as compared with $704 in Toronto, according to the latest statistics available from Information Canada. The average cost for members of our society is under $225.

Most of our members feel that it is most fitting to have a simple service with closed coffin, or better yet, a memorial service after the body has been cremated or buried.

CLARE S. YARWOOD,
President,
Memorial Society of B.C.,

Just asking

From the Globe and Mail Toronto

As long as the Royal Canadian Mounted Police is responsible for protecting Canadian national security it must have the right to obtain, by legal means, the information it needs to do the job. And it is legal in this country to ask questions.

So the complaint by a former University of Toronto student, who had recently held a federal government job, that the RCMP was asking questions about him on campus, is simply silly.

As Chief Superintendent Murray Sexsmith of RCMP security put it, "We ask a lot of questions to a lot of people. And thank God in this country they still have the right to refuse to answer. But we still have the right to ask."

The RCMP routinely conduct security checks on people employed by the government (even if, on occasion, a short term of employment has actually ended before the check gets started), and they have a right, and a duty to do so. If they allowed a person hostile to the interests of this country to remain undetected in an office in which he could do real harm to Canada, they could expect harsh criticism, and they would deserve it.

An apology

The Colonist apologizes to Premier A. E. Blakeney for identifying him with the regrettable decision to end grading and examinations in Manitoba senior high schools. The rebuke, of course, was intended for the government of Premier Edward Schreyer.

Washington Calling

How not to sell arms

By MARQUIS CHILDS

Secretary of Defence James R. Schlesinger is the greatest arms merchant in history and his sales around the world have a momentum of their own that fix American policy. Chile is a striking example.

With so much blame heaped on the CIA for abetting the military coup that overthrew the government of Salvador Allende, the role of the Department of Defence deserves examination. The Chilean generals who shot down Allende and his government were getting large amounts of U.S. military aid at the very time they were plotting the overthrow. In 1972, a year before the coup, Chile's military got $12.4 million in military hardware. The following year the amount was $15 million. The coup occurred on Sept. 11, 1973. Proposed for the 1975 fiscal year is $20.5 million.

This is in so-called credit sales which tend to be a handout for those countries favored by Defence Department. Theoretically repayable, the amounts stay on the red ink side of the ledger indefinitely.

In addition to the hardware, the Chilean military got smaller amounts for what defence calls "overseas training." Both in calendar 1972 and 1973 the amount was $900,000. In '73, 77 Chileans in uniform were trained in the United States and 313 in the training centre the country maintains in the Panama Canal Zone. The canal zone centre is said to have a high political component with training in the repression of minority opposition at the guerrilla level.

Since the armed services committees of Senate and House tend to be anterooms of the Defence Department, it is unlikely there will be any examination of what the money went for. But the American taxpayer is entitled to know whether the military hardware was used to kill the hundreds shot down in the coup and in the executions that followed.

Chile is a classic case of secret American meddling that is not only futile but self-destructive and downright evil.

Allende's minority government—he got 39 per cent of the vote — was doing about everything calculated to bring on a revolt in a country that more than any other in Latin America had a long tradition of representative democracy.

With little or no effort to bring in other elements, Allende and the Marxists around him were moving toward totalitarianism.

But throughout the Americas the fumbling Allende experiment was followed with the keenest interest. I was in Mexico City a few days before the Chilean coup. The young men around President Luis Echeverria were well aware of how precarious Allende's position was. One of them put it this way:

"We know the terrible mistakes he is making. But it was an elected government and we hope that it will survive the term for which Allende was elected."

Whether the Allende government might have fallen by the constitutional process or whether, as was widely feared, he could concentrate his authority to frustrate any lawful change, is an unanswered question. That is irrelevant today since throughout the Americas the impression is now widespread that meddling by Washington precipitated the coup.

On the other side of the world, Greece is another classic example of how the arms merchant sets policy. The fumbling, inept military junta in Athens got $58 million in "credit sales" in calendar 1972, $60 million in 1973, with $71 million proposed for the current year.

These bumbling colonels and generals set off the Greek Cypriot rebellion on Cyprus that ended with a massive Turkish invasion. One result was that the civilian government in Athens withdrew from NATO.

As though to cement the hold of the junta, the Defence Department ordered "homeporting" in Greece for elements of the Sixth Fleet. That is one reason for the anti-Americanism rampant today.

Closing out the CIA's secret, covert operations is surely desirable. In that fine bureaucratic password, it is counterproductive or worse. But at the same time there should be a close look at Schlesinger's multi-billion-dollar arms operation.

Sir William Mulock died 30 years ago today—in 1944. Pioneer of empire-wide penny postage, he entered Canadian politics in 1888 and became a minister at 52. Mr. Mulock, 100 at his death, became a legend in his own time because of his alert mind and great age. He selected W.L. Mackenzie King as head of the department of labor, which Mulock created.

'Whipsaw' negotiations

From the Winnipeg Free Press

Although they are not likely to agree with its conclusions, union leaders in Manitoba's construction industry would do well to consider recent information distributed by the labor relations council of the Winnipeg Chamber of Commerce.

Collective agreements with Manitoba's construction industry expire next April. The council suggests that the unions will have no hesitation to use what it describes as the "whipsaw" method of negotiations, a method that has seen western provinces played off against each other as unions strike first one province to gain their demands, and then another to equal or exceed the gains registered in the first fight.

In Saskatchewan this method has resulted in agreements which will see a laborer's wages and benefits rise to the equivalent of $8.17 an hour by 1976, a figure which represents a 71 per cent increase over two years. Bricklayers' wages will increase 43 per cent during the same time, and carpenters will receive at least a 50 per cent rise in wages and benefits.

In British Columbia the average wage for 16 construction trades will be $11 an hour by 1976, and crane operators will have long since moved into the $20,000 a year bracket without overtime. These agreements have gained workers average increases of 35½ per cent. This has not, however, stopped unions from demanding adjustments in cost of living benefits.

In its letter to provincial financial institutions the council says: "Due to current wage agreements being negotiated across Canada, and due to continuing inflation and erosion of the purchasing power of the tradesman's dollar, construction industry employers in Manitoba will be offering adjustments which will be described in some quarters as being 'wildly inflationary,' and 'indefensible,' and 'economically unsound.' We believe that should be acknowledged now. Despite these offers, the labor relations council expects some of the building trades to refuse them outright and to opt for a strike in order to obtain more."

The council says that the industry will be derelict in its duty if it does not resist any move whereby the unions would gain increases based neither on increased productivity nor on cost of living, but which are purely inflationary.

Can the buyers of construction afford inflationary wage costs in addition to what they are now paying? Union leaders who enforce their demands through strikes will have to accept the responsiblity for the consequences, not the least of which may be a recession. A recession will first hit the people whom the union leaders represent, since construction is among the first of all industries to feel economic changes.

Indian, Inuit land claims major barrier to fantastic project

Arctic gas: Canada will have final say

By RON MOXNESS, from Calgary

Millions of consumers of naural gas along the U.S. west coast, in the midwest, and as far east as Pennsylvania have a stake in a controversial 48-inch, natural-gas pipeline that would, if built, snake its way for 2,600 miles from Alaska's Prudhoe Bay to the MacKenzie River Valley and Alberta. The line would provide gas to markets in both Canada and the United States.

The pipeline project is gargantuan. It is estimated to cost more than $8 billion when supporting systems on the U.S. side of the border are completed. The price tag is roughly twice the estimated cost of Alaska's mammoth oil pipeline now under construction.

Applications to construct the line made to federal agencies at both Ottawa and Washington, have come at a time when Canada is reassessing its current reserves and future needs for natural gas, which today supplies about 20 per cent of the country's energy.

The applications have also been made at a time when native residents of Canada's sprawling Northwest Territories, both Indians and Eskimo (or "Inuit," the "people" now being widely used), are pressing land claims in the Yukon and up the valley of the Mackenzie. Much of the pipeline would pass through contested land areas.

The project, the Canadian part of which is called the Canadian Arctic Gas Pipeline, would dwarf such projects as the St. Lawrence Seaway on the basis of costs alone.

Formal application to build the line was made last March 21 by a consortium of 16 Canadian and 11 U.S. companies, which would like to see Arctic gas flowing to markets in Canada and the United States by the end of the decade. The Arctic gas line would move 4.5 billion cubic feet of natural gas daily—roughly divided between Canadian and U.S. markets.

Roger Ward, former lieutenant governor of Alaska and president of the U.S. side of the network, named the Alaskan Arctic Gas Pipeline, said the U.S. facility would involve a new 1,600-mile-long line terminating at Delmont, Pa., near Pittsburgh.

Another 618-mile line would connect British Columbia and San Francisco terminals. An additional 877-mile line would move gas from British Columbia to the Los Angeles area through 42-inch pipe.

The entire project, if approved by both countries, would more than double the natural-gas supply now flowing through existing lines of the Pacific Gas Transmission Company, which has been selling or delivering gas to its agents since 1961 in Idaho, Washington, Oregon, and California. The new line, like the existing line of PGT, would skirt Spokane, Wash., on its southern route.

Pacific Gas is currently the largest importer of Canadian gas, providing about 35 per cent of the U.S. supply from Canada.

The proposed new natural-gas flow into the United States, according to Ward, would amount to roughly six per cent of the present U.S. market demand.

Prime Minister Trudeau has already said it would be in the public interest to facilitate "early construction" of the line. But he has also insisted that ecological and social issues involving some 7,000 native inhabitants of the Mackenzie River Valley and others in the Yukon must be fully resolved before the pipe can be laid.

Thus the pipeline still faces three major hurdles. First is the current series of Canadian hearings into the question of the long-term supply of natural gas. Second is the environmental impact of the line.

Third, and perhaps most critical, is the socio-economic impact of the line on native residents of the Northwest Territories, who increasingly see opposition to the project as a lever to force settlement of long-standing claims. Here is a look at each of the three issues:

Both Canada's National Energy Board and Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development have been conducting hearings on natural-gas supplies. The hearings, particularly as they involve the native-claims arguments, are expected to be long, involved, and costly.

At a minimum, they might delay construction starts for a year or more.

John Poyen of Calgary, president of the Canadian Petroleum Association and a veteran of the oil-pipeline environmental studies carried out at Inuvik in the Northwest Territories, says the ultimate decision on the pipeline lies with the Trudeau government.

In Poyen's view, the federal decision must rest on two major points: first, a determination by the National Energy Board that sufficient new sources of natural gas exist to meet Canada's long-range growth demands, and second, a finding that surpluses exist in volumes justifying new exports of Canadian natural gas.

At the end of 1972, Poyen said, there were about 53 trillion cubic feet of natural gas available in Canada—of which an estimated 41 trillion cubic feet were in Alberta and another nine trillion cubic feet in British Columbia.

While the oil and natural-gas wealth north of the 60th parallel has been estimated in astronomical figures by a number of authoritative bodies, Poyen sticks to the relatively hard estimates of proven supply. In this area, Prudhoe Bay's proven reserves run from 25 to 30 trillion cubic feet, sufficient in themselves to justify pipeline transmission.

There are an additional seven to nine trillion cubic feet in the MacKenzie River Delta region—not enough alone to justify transport to remote markets. But it is the basic contention of industry and other supporters of the project that the two supplies, when pooled, more than justify the entire network.

Canadian nationalists, on the other hand, insist that the Mackenzie Delta supply, despite the promise of major future discoveries, should be held in reserve for the country's future needs.

The line's supporters argue that Canada itself will need Arctic gas by 1979 and that only the combination of U.S. and Canadian markets can justify the huge outlays involved in development, a figure which could reach $9 billion if delays are encountered. Arctic Gas has promised that gas reaching U.S. markets would be surplus to Canadian needs, a requirement of Canada's National Energy Board.

Environmentally, the line probablywould not be as controversial as the Alaska oil pipeline, which was delayed by a powerful coalition of U.S. environmental organizations.

The Arctic gas line would be a "cool system"—Chilled to about 25 degrees F. and thus not likely to damage permafrost areas—in contrast to the Alaskan "hot line" connecting Prudhoe Bay to Valdez in the south. It also would be completely buried, thus posing no problems to migrating caribou and other animals.

Even more complex than the environmental questions, however, will be the hearings into the impact of the line on Canada's northern natives.

The 7,000-strong Indian Brotherhood of the Northwest Territories, now in a legal fight over land claims with the federal government, sees the Mackenzie River piepline as a powerfull bargaining tool. Their hopes are fueled by the Indians and Inuit of the neighboring Yukon who are moving toward a settlemen based on aboriginal rights.

Canada's Indians in the Northwest Territories, most of whom live in settlements along the Mackenzie River Valley, in 1921 signed a treaty ceding their lands to the federal government in return for traditional hunting rights, an annual payment of "treaty" money (ordinarily a few dollars), and a square mile of land for each family of five.

Ottawa argues that the treaty constitutes a land-claim settlement or for the 7,000 treaty Indians. They, however, say their forefathers were duped.

They claim that the treaty does not abrogate rights granted when Rupert's Land and the Northwest Territories were transferred to Canadian government control in 1870. The Indians of the Mackenzie have won an initial round — a court "freeze" on contested lands until the case is decided.

The Yukon Indians and the Inuit, federal officials assert, signed no treaties and are in a legal position to negotiate aboriginal rights.

The $1 billion and 40 million acres of land that the U.S. government previously awarded Alaska's more numerous native people — some 90,000 Indians, Eskimo, and Aleuts — have not been lost sight of by the Eskimo and Indians of the Yukon and the Northwest Territories.

Why uneasy peace reigns over Black Dragon River

Russia tricked China in 1860

By DENIS WARNER
From Canberra

The Chinese call the Amur the Black Dragon River, and the Japanese named one of their most ultranationalistic societies after it in the days when they were itching to go to war with Russia.

For Russia, it is the main artery of its Far Eastern empire. Navigable in the summer monsoon period for most of its 2,700 miles, the river carries grain, salt and manufactured goods downstream and crude and refined oil, fish and lumber upstream.

The Russians got their hands on the lower course of the river, and all the land stretching down the coast from the mouth to Korea, by the Sino-Russian Treaty of Peking in 1860.

The Chinese, with every justification, regard the treaty as probably the greatest international confidence trick in history.

While pretending to act as mediators with the British and French forces which had looted and burned the Summer Palace outside Peking, the Russians in effect blackmailed the Chinese into conceding the riverways and land, without which they could not have built their Far Eastern empire.

They bribed the Chinese leaders into permitting them to build the Trans-Siberian Railway across Manchuria, helped themselves to Port Arthur and would have seized all of Manchuria if the Japanese, in 1905, had not driven them out.

The seeds for Russian and Chinese discord were firmly planted and, except for a brief period in the 1950s, they fave flourished ever since.

The Amur, or at least its tributary, the Ussuri, almost led to war between the two countries in 1969. And the waterways have again been prominent in the new round of the trouble.

This began with the capture of a Russian helicopter over Chinese territory early in the year and deteriorated quickly when the Russians, on May 23, restricted Chinese use of the waterways near Khabarovsk.

Again, the Chinese felt they were being tricked.

With great cunning in 1860, the Russians drew the boundary along the Chinese side of the rivers. The Chinese have always insisted that the line should be in the middle of the river, and to have agreed to the Soviet demands would merely have perpetuated the Russian hold.

With the return of Leonid Ilyichev, a Russian deputy foreign minister, to Peking in June after an absence of 11 months, there were hopes that relations might start to improve. But, as usual, they got nowhere.

According to the well-informed Warsaw newspaper, Zycie Warszawy, the negotiations arrived at a dead end almost immediately after they began.

The Chinese submitted a proposal to conclude a provisional agreement on maintaining the status quo and only then proceed to the main question of final settlement of the border line.

Much against their own better judgment, the Russians finally concurred only to be faced with two basic Chinese conditions:

That the Russians were to move back the existing border line far within their present territory and to withdraw their armed forces and border guards into a number of sectors while the Chinese troops remained in the original positions.

Predictably enough, the negotiations collapsed and there immediately began a further military build-up on either side of the border.

★ ★ ★

Victor Louis reported in the French newspaper, France Soir, that there was tension all along the 4,700 miles of the frontier.

At the same time, the Red Star (published by the Russian defence ministry) accused the Chinese of conducting an "unprecedented campaign of militarization in all spheres of public life" and of spending more than 40 per cent of the national budget on arms.

Up to 60 Russian army divisions are now said to be in the Far East, compared with the Institute of Strategic Studies' estimate of 49 a year ago.

Missile sites are believed to have been increased significantly, as have the numer of aircraft.

But whereas only a year ago the Chinese were obviously afraid of a Russian attack, they now tell visitors that the greatest dangers are in Europe itself.

Russian activity in the Far East, they seem to think is in the classic Maoist tradition of making a noise in the east while preparing to strike in the west.

As for the Russians, they agree with Victor Louis, but say that the Chinese alone are responsible for all the tension.

With the autumn now well advanced in Siberia and the deep chill of winter just ahead, the quarrel will be frozen hard, like the Amur itself, for the winter. But we may be sure that it will be as fresh as ever come the northern spring.

Economist sees snags

An economist from the University of British Columbia said last week the porposed Mackenzie pipeline might not be built.

John Helliwell said the 27-company pipeline consortium might not be able to obey a National Energy Board ruling that some Arctic gas be used in Canada.

The NEB might make the ruling as public pressure to keep the gas in Canada mounts, he said, although the consortium, Canadian Arctic Gas Study, Ltd., has committed itself to contracts selling most of the pipeline's potential to United States companies.

Helliwell said gas export contracts have been made for 15 trillion cubic feet of natural gas.

He said the proven Mackenzie delta reserves are now four trillion cubic feet, with more expected to be announced.

Helliwell said two other proposals for moving the gas out of the Arctic might destroy the consortium bid for the pipeline.

An all-Canadian proposal by the Alberta Gas Trunk Line Co. and Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd. would bring the gas to southern Canada. Helliwell said this would eliminate the consortium's proposed Alaska spur line.

El Paso Co., of Houston has proposed bringing Prudhoe Bay natural gas out by another Alaska pipeline. Helliwell said acceptance of this offer would also end the consortium proposal.

Studies at the university indicate it will not be necessary to include Alaska gas in the pipeline by the early 1980s to make the project economically feasible, said Helliwell.

Maybe you never spoke to him about drinking. But you've told him plenty.

On the subject of drinking, it's not only what you say, it's how you act.

In the family and community where solid values and moderation are a way of life, youngsters develop a sense of responsibility towards liquor—and living.

If some day they decide to use liquor, chances are they'll use common sense with it. They won't try to twist the arms of friends who choose not to drink. And if any friend constantly drinks too much, they'll figure it's a sign of sickness, not machismo.

For young and old, the same basic principle applies.

Editor of Times retires

Brian Tobin, who retired Monday after almost four decades as a newspaperman which led him to editorship of Victoria Times, came close to not being a newspaperman at all.

He had planned and studied to be a chartered accountant, but in those Depression years was thankful for a job with the Liquor Control Board.

There he saved enough to book passage on a freighter (he longed to travel), and on the afternoon before sailing received a job offer from one of Canada's leading chartered accountancy firms. After brief but deep thought, he plumped for the freighter — and that led to a different career altogether.

Tobin was born in Victoria, educated here and at the University of British Columbia, and in 1934 had already made one motorcycle tour of Britain and Europe.

That decisive freighter trip came early in 1939, taking him to Europe and, for some time, to Berlin to study Germany. No one thought then there would be a war but when it seemed inevitable he was in Venice.

When war broke out, he went to Zurich, Switzerland, and from there by sealed train through France to Calais and England.

Great good luck brought him a return passage to Canada aboard the same freighter (he could only do this as the captain's guest) and, having been writing to the Times during the "phoney war" months, he decided to get into newspaper work.

British United Press wire service — now United Press International — was his first employer, first in Vancouver, then he went back to England aboard one of the United States' lend-lease destroyers to cover Canadian army activities and the blitz.

After his return to Canada he opened the service's Halifax bureau, then moved to Winnipeg before deciding to get on with a newspaper.

That brought him, on April 1, 1947, to the Times as associate editor and considerable activity as well with community organizations such as the Community Chest, CNIB, Art Gallery, Library Board, University of Victoria and more.

A widower for a few years, Tobin has one son, three daughters, and a house in Cadboro Bay which will occupy much of his spare time. Naturally, travel is also in his plans.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Federal energy minister Donald Macdonald is full of hot air when he says the price of natural gas to Canadians will double within five years, Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said Sunday.

"I don't see increases of that magnitude," the attorney-general said when asked to comment on Macdonald's statement, made last week before the World Energy Conference in Detroit.

"We should be able to move toward a two-price system that can give the Canadian consumer a break and tie the export price to world demand," he said.

The attorney-general said natural gas is under-priced in relation to other energy sources but the federal minister's prediction is too drastic.

Alex Macdonald said the B.C. government has not yet decided whether it will give consumers relief from rising energy prices in the form of energy grants similar to the homeowner and renter grants.

Legislation passed earlier this year gives the cabinet, through the energy commission, the power to give refunds to consumers hit by energy price hikes.

"It will depend on the provincial budget next year and the success of the resource revenue programs," the attorney-general said.

"If they are successful, the money should be returned to the people in some form."

Macdonald said the cabinet would ask the energy commission to investigate price increases that appear to cause hardship among certain groups, and authorize the payment of grants if it found them desirable.

Princess Marguerite is finished

Docking with tenderness

The captain admitted he brought the Princess Marguerite alongside the dock in the Inner Harbor Monday with a little more feeling than usual.

"Let's just say tender," was the way Capt. William Warden described the landing.

He had reason for the emotion in his voice as it was the last trip for the Marguerite, ending a 70-year-old Canadian Pacific ferry service between Seattle and Victoria.

"It's very sad," Warden said of the 25-year-old Marguerite's final trip on the run and the end of a colorful peice of B.C. maritime history, "I suppose not only for myself but for the officers and crew as well."

Warden, who has been in command of the Marguerite for the past three years, said he began working for the CP ferry system in 1948, the same year the Marguerite joined the Victoria-Seattle run.

He said he will take a week off and then be placed in command of another CP ship. Most of the 35 permanent crew members of the Marguerite will be relocated in other ships. The remainder of the ship's crew of 90 are summer help.

When the company announced last week that the Victoria-Seattle run would be discontinued, it laid the blame on the fact that the ship had lost $272,000 in the last three years.

Warden said cancellation of the service has been on the horizon for the past three years owing to increased operating costs. For example, he said, the company will spend about $300,000 this year for fuel, three times what it cost the previous year.

Allan Cairns, marine superintendent for B.C. Coastal Steamships a CP Rail subsidiary, said the ship will remain in the city's Inner Harbor until she is sold. There are some people interested in the purchase, he said, but he would not give any details.

Among the 260 passengers on Monday's final run were Mr. and Mrs. Ted Stacey of Seattle, who have made the Seattle - Victoria round trip aboard the CP ferries every year since 1926.

Also on board was Paul Nelson of Seattle who has made the trip 13 times before. "It's really too sad," he said, "I really hated to get off."

Warden said many of the passengers aboard the final run were there for sentimental reasons, like the woman who was "just about in tears" when she spoke to him as she had made the trip before for her honeymoon.

And then there was the couple who sent him the following note:

"We have very much enjoyed all our trips to Victoria, through our courtship, honeymoon and marriage. You will always have a special place in our memories. We will miss you."

Bennett predicts fall '75 election

CHILLIWACK (CP) — Premier Barrett will call an election for the fall of 1975, Social Credit leader Bill Bennett told his party's Fraser Valley regional conference during the weekend.

Bennett said the premier will call the election earlier than the traditional four-year gap because Barrett will not want to face the winter legislative session which will reveal New Democratic Party economic mismanagement.

Bob McClelland (SC—Langley) called Barrett a traitor because "he has betrayed the trust which has been bestowed upon him by the public."

"He should go to the people right now and ask them if they want him to continue that stewardship. I suggest they'll say a resounding 'no way'."

Delegates produced two resolutions which declared firm opposition to fluoridation of water supplies — an issue that was approved by the recent Social Credit policy conference at Harrison Hot Springs.

Another resolution called for the return of strapping in public schools.

Board rapped for delays on hospitals

The protest against delays by the Capital Region Hospital Board in initiating major hospital construction and renovation programs is heating up.

Dr. A. C. Pickles, executive director of Royal Jubilee Hospital, said Monday some parts of the hospital are in urgent need of renovation.

He referred to a statement last week by regional board chairman Arthur Young that major renovation programs will have to wait for at least one year after the new hospital planning agency is formed.

Pickles said it is "a great pity" that the two major acute hospitals, both burdened with obsolete physical plants, will have to wait another year.

"We could provide high-level patient care more effectively and efficiently with a new physical plant," he said.

Victoria General Hospital board decided last week to send a letter to Young expressing concern over the delay.

Hugh Curtis, Saanich-the Islands MLA, called the delay intolerable and said he wasn't satisfied with assurances from Young that construction of an acute-care wing at Saanich Peninsula Hospital would be the first priority of the hospital planning commission after its formation.

"I appealed to Art that surely it is possible to break out of this bureaucratic entanglement and provide 75 acute beds" at the peninsula hospital, Curtis said.

The regional board is like a dog "chasing its tail," he complained, and there's been "planning upon planning but they're not building beds."

Curtis, a former Capital region chairman, said he sympathizes with Young, but the hospital board has "to get the lead out."

Construction of the new acute wing in the peninsula was promised by Health Minister Dennis Cocke this summer during a meeting with area residents, Curtis said, and approval by the region shouldn't be held up until the roles Victoria General and Royal Jubilee should play are resolved.

He said provision of "75 beds will have little effect on what happens to Royal Jubilee and Victoria General."

The acute wing would replace Resthave Hospital, Sidney, Curtis added, which is in "extremely serious" condition.

Before major construction begins at any hospital in the region, the Hospital and Health Planning Commission, as the new agency will be called, will have to study a consultant's report on functional planning for all area hospitals. The consultant is expected to be appointed as soon as the commission is established.

13 Hearings probe status of workers

The status of farm workers and domestic help in B.C. will be investigated next month by the Legislature's labor and justice committee in 13 hearings around the province.

The first hearing will be held Oct. 9 in the legislative buildings.

The 12-member committee, headed by Colin Gabelmann (NDP—North Vancouver-Seymour) will consider whether farm workers and domestic help should be given protection under the B.C. Labor Code and the Minimum Wage Act and the right to workers' compensation.

These workers now are excluded from this protection in all areas of Canada. But federal Manpower Minister Robert Andras has urged the provinces to include farm workers in the labor standards legislation.

B.C. still wants into bank world

Premier Barrett indicated on the weekend his New Democratic Party government wants to get into the financial business in one form or another.

He said in an interview after last week's western premiers' conference that his government might become directly involved in provincially-controlled financial institutions if Ottawa does not soon allow provinces to own shares in chartered banks.

Prior to the Western Economic Opportunites Conference in Calgary last year, Barrett asked that the provinces be allowed to own shares in banks.

Prime Minister Trudeau later announced that provinces would be allowed to buy up to 25 per cent of shares of newly-established banks but would then have to slowly divest themselves of some shares until the holdings were reduced to 10 per cent.

Barrett said he is displeased Ottawa hasn't acted on that promise and if the change doesn't come soon, "we will have to examine other financial institutions because we are not going to stand by while B.C. consumers are being hurt by the usurious practices of the existing banks."

Asked if this meant provincial involvement in credit unions or financial co-operatives which come under provincial jurisdiction, Barrett said "it could mean a great number of things" but refused to elaborate.

Barrett said chartered banks are making profits of between 23 and 25 per cent which he said is usurious, especially in a period of high inflation.

The premier said they are making this money on short-term loans rather than on mortgages where profits are lower.

Today's severe housing shortage and difficulties in obtaining mortgage money mean the banks have a socially irresponsible attitude, he said.

Barrett suggested that the banks be required by law to put a certain portion of their money with a six-per-cent interest rate for low and middle-income families.

"The people should know the banks have been skinning them alive. Bank profits have never been higher. They are having a heyday at the expense of the poor Canadian wage-earner."

He said the Bank of Canada has the power to force banks to live up to their responsibilities but it is not using them because it is a tool of the federal government.

Oktoberfest due for fast

MUNICH, West Germany (AP)—Rainy weather and high beer costs have sharply reduced crowds and profits at the Oktoberfest. Boozy brawls are also down.

Levi defends social costs

VANCOUVER (CP) — Social services costs are continuing to rise but the money is well spent, Human Resources Minister Norman Levi said on the weekend.

He said in a speech while opening a day care centre here that day care costs for each child have risen to $120 a month from $80 since the New Democratic Party government took over.

"You can expect as time passes that this is going to go up further," he said.

Government expenditures for day care have risen to about $14 million this year from $1.7 million in 1972 but a $100 million budgetary overrun in his department will not affect the program because the money has already been budgeted, Levi said.

The minister said the government will continue to work to increase salaries of day care workers although recent wage increases caused part of the budget overrun.

Salaries have risen to $550 to $650 a month from $250 to $350 but "we're still a long way from meeting the salaries we think should be received," he said.

Lucky Leo lottery

Early bird prizes

Three Vancouver Island residents won early bird prizes of $100 in the first draw of the Lucky Leo Lottery Saturday organized by B.C. Lions Society for Crippled Children.

The draw, held in Prince George, was made by an eight-year-old handicapped boy in the central Interior city.

Victoria winners were D. H. Elliott of 934 Collinson and Mrs. M. L. Cawsey of 946 Falaise. The third winner, Rich Barjs lives at 155 Urquhart in Courtenay.

Ray St. Denis, the society's assistant executive director, said the next early bird draw will be held Oct. 21 and tickets are available at all One-Hour Martinizing, K-Marts on weekends and at a kiosk set up at the corner of Yates and Douglas.

ICBC hassle shuts centre

VANCOUVER (CP) — All 25 employees of the Insurance Corporation of British Columbia claims centre in Burnaby booked off sick Monday.

The workers closed down the claims centre shortly before the B.C. Labor Relations Board opened a hearing on union representation for all 1,400 ICBC workers throughout the province.

Union spokesmen at the hearing described the workers as being restless and frustrated over delays in getting union representation.

An ICBC spokesman said there was a danger of other walkouts.

The board hearing is investigating whether to order a joint council of unions to represent the workers or to hold a second representation vote.

The Canadian Union of Public Employees and the B.C. Government Employees Union, who have formed an association, agreed to a joint council to represent the workers but the Office and Technical Employees Union has called for a representation vote.

Labor Minister William King referred the issue to the board after OTEU rejected the idea of a council. Prior to that, the board disallowed the first representation vote when it appeared that none of the unions had sufficient ICBC staff signed up.

Ole Johnson of CUPE told the board Monday that its own indecision had caused a lot of the unrest at ICBC and it was "imperative that the employees get into certification."

John Fryer of BCGEU said his union welcomed the labor minister's intervention and expressed regret that the unions had not voluntarily formed a council when they had the chance last week.

Fryer disagreed with OTEU and added that "the real danger now is that a representation ballot would not have a conclusive result."

Fred Trotter, of OTEU, said that 226 workers in the claims centre had now swung over to his union, giving them their majority of the ICBC work force.

He said the representation vote should be held first and that a joint council should be considered after that if a clear majority is not achieved.

What is the right gasoline for your car?

Good Gulf Regular.

Good Gulf is our least expensive gasoline. It is formulated to satisfy the requirements of most cars manufactured before 1975 and can also be used in 1975 cars unless unleaded gasoline is specified.

NOTE: All Gulf motor gasolines, Regular, Futura and Premium, contain an effective additive package that helps keep carburetors clean and minimizes engine deposits to maintain peak performance.

Unleaded Gulf Futura.*

Unleaded Gulf Futura is our newest gasoline. It costs a few cents more than Good Gulf Regular. It is the right gasoline for all 1975 cars equipped with catalytic converters. Futura helps reduce exhaust emissions, increases spark plug life and substantially extends the life of muffler systems. Even if your car doesn't have a catalytic device, unleaded Futura will still give you these benefits. Futura also meets manufacturers' specifications for most cars manufactured since 1971. (Check your owner's manual.)

Gulf Premium No-Nox.

Index keeps slipping

The industrial index lost 2.68 points to 151.43, a low since July 15, 1970, when it was 151.09. The index has fallen almost seven points in the last three sessions, largely in response to widespread losses on the New York market and to economic worries.

Anglo-Canadian Pulp was up 1¾ to $19½. Reed Paper Co. Ltd. said more than 90 per cent of the 1.1 milion shares of Anglo it did not previously own have been tendered under its Aug. 23 share exchange offer. Anglo-Canadian also announced newsprint price increases to U. S. customers, effective Jan. 1.

Dome Pete fell 2⅜ to $17¼, Falconbridge Nickel 2 to $28, Moore 1⅝ to $34¼, Texasgulf 1 to $22⅜, Asbestos Corp. 1 to $13½ and Distillers Corp. 1 to $26¾.

Among golds, Dome Mines rose 2½ to $42½, Sigma 1½ to $29½, Quebec Sturgeon ⅝ to $5¾, Pamour ½ to $10¼ and Camflo ⅜ to $11.

Aquitaine of Canada gained 1⅛ to $15⅞, WCI Canada 1 to $8½ and Bushnell 1 to $9½.

McIntyre Mines lost 2⅜ to $21½, Pine Point ⅝ to $27, Kerr Addison A ⅝ to $8¾ and Canada Tungsten 50 cents to $3.50.

Dictaphone suing Northern Electric

RYE, N.Y. (CNW) — Dictaphone Corporation Monday filed suit in the federal district court in New York to enjoin Northern Electric Co., Ltd.'s tender offer to gain control of Dictaphone, charging the Canadian firm with fraud in its purchases of Dictaphone stock.

The suit also charged Northern Electric with making serious misstatements in its tender offer made on Sept. 24, and filed with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission.

Last week, Dictaphone's board of directors labeled the Montreal company's $12 per share offer "inadequate" and unanimously urged shareholders to reject it.

In a letter to shareholders Monday, Lawrence Tabat, Dictaphone's president and chief executive officer, informed them of the suit and urged them not to be "stampeded" into tendering the shares; but to hold them in order to take advantage of any better offer which might materialize.

Dictaphone is a leading manufacturer of dictating machines and automatic telephone answering systems and other products.

Can we beat inflation?

Big budget question

By BRUCE WHITESTONE
From Montreal

Pundits will doubtless spend the next few weeks discussing whether or not the federal budget unveiled last May will be changed.

The real questions, however, both here, and in the United States should be very much bigger ones: what is the best way of coping with the disruptive impact of the immense forces of our near runaway inflation and how can the next budget help to accomplish this goal?

Inflation has, of course, become the paramount global economic problem. It is devouring a significant portion of our real take home pay. As a result, consumer pessimism is rampant and people must now realize that they are worse off than a year ago. This holds true not only in North America but in Western Europe as well.

Price turbulence is having such a disorienting effect on family budgeting that even those who receive cost of living allowances or are fully compensated on paper by wage increases, are adversely affected. Cost of living indices understate the true inflation rates so standards of living are suffering. Further, as our economic system is buffeted by inflationary stresses, unemployment is starting to rise.

Of course, the finance minister could propose tax relief to reduce temporarily the pressure on personal budgets. However, any tax cuts here would soon lead to even more inflation, so that price rises would fully offset any increase in take home pay. Yet, something unique must be done to alleviate the inevitable rise in unemployment.

There is a psychological problem here as well. What kind of tax changes could be implemented to restore confidence to the public or to neutralize the increasingly acute fears among the public at large? Concern about current and future prospects cannot be alleviated by any more tinkering or cosmetic changes in a new federal budget.

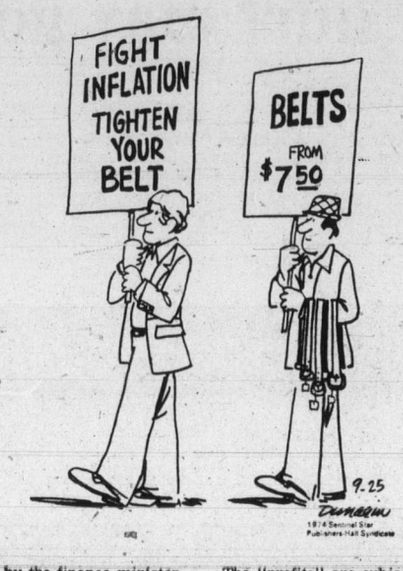

It is not only the 11 per cent inflation rate that is reducing real incomes and generating consumer pessimism. It is also damaging individual and corporate savings and, therefore, disrupting the entire savings and investment process.

Current inflation rates are eroding savings accounts, life insurance policies, and materially impair the ability of pension funds to make adequate provision for the retired. In short, so many people now consider themselves to be either in or approaching a precarious position, that some drastic steps must be taken by the finance minister. Otherwise their spending patterns will reflect their fears.

That is an additional reason why it will be equally difficult to get the business community to maintain an optimistic attitude. It is, after all, little use increasing output if unemployment is going to rise and consumer spending begins to contract.

Further the deep seated character that inflation has assumed is throwing up several other problems. Savers are reluctant to commit money to capital development on a long term basis for fear that new inflationary excesses will mean that there is no real return on capital. Borrowers are unable to borrow long term capital so they seek accommodation in the banking system, further straining banks' liquidity.

Inflation has had an additional effect on corporations over the past several years. The rapid rise in costs means that capital spending budgets are going awry; forward planning is being brought to a standstill. Also, in spite of the apparent rise in earnings, much if not most of the gains reflect increases in inventory prices.

The "profits" are subject to taxes yet the inventories have to be replaced at even higher cost. Corporations are paying taxes on illusory profits and replacement costs continue to rise. It is no surprise that corporate cash balances are being severly strained.

A new budget must attempt to do something about these very serious problems of corporate liquidity, consumer hesitancy and weakened savings patterns.

It seems clear that things have gone too far for sorting out by minor adjustments. The federal budget last May contained innovative proposals which would have permitted $1,000 in interest payments to be tax-free and which would have encouaged savings for house purchases by exempting from taxes $1,000 annually in funds which were set aside for buying a house.

The principle of encouraging savings is a good one and needs to be expanded further. Also, fiscal and monetary measures must be used on a scale unprecendented in the post war era. Spending must be cut and taxes increased wherever feasible.

This is another way of saying that, to return to normality the world will have to be ready to encompass much more radical changes in the views of what government can and should do. It must change its "Santa Claus" image first. Then it will have to aim at creating a constructive money foundation on which to build our shattered confidence, one that ensures that our currency will not be inflated endlessly.

The foregoing is a tall order for any finance minister. Now that the Trudeau government has a clear mandate, one must hope that its next budget can meet the urgent needs of the nation.

Gold crashes $150

BRUSSELS (UPI) — Gold crashed through the $150 barrier Monday. It jumped $5.25 from Friday to close in London at $151.25 an ounce. It jumped even higher in Zurich, rising to $151.50 an ounce from Friday's $146.25.

London bullion dealers said very strong buying had lifted gold from Friday's $146.25 quotation.

Egypt cancels Russian jet

CAIRO (UPI)—Egypt has decided to cancel its order for eight Russian-built Tu154 jetliners, citing "numerous and major defects" in the aircraft's performance that jeopardize the safety of passengers, the weekly newspaper Akhbar El-Yom said.

One of the Tupolev planes crashed in flames during a training flight at the Egyptian military academy near Cairo airport July killing two Egyptian and four Soviet crewmen.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Reports of the discovery of a huge natural gas deposit off the Labrador coast were circulating here Monday with government spokesmen saying only that confidential information had been submitted by Eastcan Exploration Ltd.

Some reports here said the discovery in a well named Gudrid being drilled beneath the seabed 80 miles east of Cape Harrison consisted of between three trillion and 20 trillion cubic feet of natural gas.

LONDON (CP) — Massey-Ferguson Ltd. of Toronto, which has world-wide interests in the manufacture of industrial and construction machinery, has made a major new investment by acquiring a big West German operation based in Hanover.

The agreement involves Hanomag, the construction machinery division of Rheinstahl a.g., a group specializing in steel, shipbuilding and engineering.

"The total cost is likely to exceed 120 million west German marks ($46 million), depending on the level of inventory," said a Massey-Ferguson statement.

Barrett cautious on profit control

One of the few things that pleased Premier Barrett in the throne speech Monday was the federal government's announcement that it would share the cost of home nursing programs.

"I'm very pleased with the announcement, but I hope it also means there will be cost sharing in chronic care," he said. "If it doesn't we'll continue to press for that, but at least we've won a bit."

Barrett said he was interested in the announcement on support for housing but would have to wait and see just what the details were before commenting.

On the throne speech promise to curb excess profits, Barrett also said he would adopt a wait-and-see attitude.

"I am curious in the terms of the details," he said. "The concept is one that's admirable, especially when you recognize that, for example, here in British Columbia Standard Oil paid no income tax at all between 1965 and 1971 and that international oil companies are making huge profits in Canada now."

Barrett said he was delighted to hear that Prime Minister Trudeau had decided to call a series of meetings on inflation.

"I note that he intends to meet with the provinces and I hope it will not be a province by province meeting, but a straight meeting between the premiers and the prime minister, rather than going from province to province."

The premier noted that the request for such a summit meeting had been made by each premier in recent weeks and originally rejected by Ottawa.

"I can only think they (Ottawa) realized an error had been made in turning down the suggestion in the beginning," he said.

Tory leader Scott Wallace wasn't quite so charitable.

"I think the most significant part of the speech was the promise of legislation to control profits," Walace said. "While he did not include in the same sentence wages and prices, it's very clear to me that this liberal government plans to bring in the back door what the Conservatives were saying they would bring in through the front door.

Stanfield campaigned on legislation to control wages, prices and profits and right off the bat with the throne speech we find the Liberal government already promising legislation to control profits, and I would predict that it won't be long before the Liberals do exactly what the Conservatives said was necessary during the campaign."

Wallace said at least the Conservatives took the issue head-on but it looks as though the Liberals want to slip wage and price controls in a graduated way and that, he said, was a contradiction of their election pledges.

Wallace also said he was disappointed to hear so much of the throne speech dedicated to constraint in spending "while in the next breath they talk about expansion of programs dealing with transportation, social services, pensions and goodness knows what else. I just find a tremendous contradiction."

Russian deserter comes to light after 30 years

MOSCOW (UPI) — A Soviet army deserter has surrendered to authorities after spending the last 30 years hiding in a darkened corner of a Ukrainian pig pen, the newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda reported.

The newspaper of the Young Communist League said Vasily Khvyl, now a stooped, gray-haired man of 52, had been detained for a few hours and then released under an amnesty adopted by the government more than a quarter century ago.

According to the newspaper account, Khvyl deserted from the German front in 1944 and made his way back to his family's farm in the Ukrainian village of Ostrozhets.

He took refuge in the hay loft of the family's barn and later built himself a tiny hideout in the shack of an adjacent pig pen.

He said he wasn't hiding because he feared the Soviet law, but because he was afraid of being forced to join a pro-Nazi Ukrainian group called Banderovshchina.

He said that after the pro-Nazi movement was wiped out, he still avoided giving himself up to avoid tarnishing the reputation of a younger brother who had become a local official.

The paper said Khvyl's brothers and sisters had kept his whereabouts a secret, even after they moved away and married.

"His 30 years in hiding were terribly monotonous and the entire time could be compressed into a few verbs: sit, lie, eat and look through a crack," the newspaper said.

Komsomolskaya Pravada said Khvyl's skin had become a pallid bluish white from the prolonged darkness and his eyes permanently squinted from peering at the outside world through a crack.

The newspaper said Khvyl had been given a job on a local collective farm.

Airport ready behind schedule

MONTREAL (CP)—Montreal's new Mirabel airport will go into service in the fall of 1975, a year and a half behind the original schedule, Transport Minister Jean Marchand said. The airport at Ste. Scholastique, 25 miles north of here, was originally slated to open last May but has been delayed until April, 1975, with passenger service starting next fall, the minister said.

Robbers thwarted at service station

A Victoria police report said one of the men set a fire in a garbage container outside the Mohawk station at 3005 Douglas in an effort to distract manager Wayne Wrigley. The fire-setter's companion grabbed some bills from the till but another employee got them back in a brief struggle and the two intruders fled.

Fire damage was described as minor.

Court may go to nights

The B.C. Supreme Court may begin holding night sessions this week in an attempt to complete testimony in the Society of the Love of Jesus trial before mid-October, Mr. Justice H. C. McKay said Monday.

The judge, who had earlier indicated he would consider the night sessions, said Monday he was agreeable to defence counsel Cecil Branson's suggestion to slate the sessions for at least two nights this week.

The night sittings will be in addition to the usual 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daytime sessions.

Testimony given Monday, first day of the third week of the trial, was largely concerned with evidence given by earlier witnesses.

The trial is being heard to determine which of two feuding factions of the society should be awarded control of it and its assets estimated at $1.5 million.

S.W.A.G. feels edge of Pollen's answer

By HUBERT BEYER
Colonist Reporter

Many a group or individual has been sliced into neat ribbons by the sharp tongue of Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen.

The latest to undergo that treatment is the Status of Women Action Group, which demanded, in a letter to the mayor, an up-to-date report on how far the women's rights movement has progressed at city hall.

The letter, signed by the group's vice-president Jean Mohart, applauds Pollen for his attitude toward grievances expressed by female city hall employees over their wage rates in comparison with unskilled outside workers.

Following that pat on the back, the letter goes on:

"We'd like to know from you whether city council has taken action in this matter. Could you tell us if any females are outside workers? Are there any females on your supervisory staff?"

The letter also says that various women's rights groups are "inundated these days with complaints" regarding discrimination against females at Victoria city hall.

They mayor, never one to reject a challenge, fired off a reply:

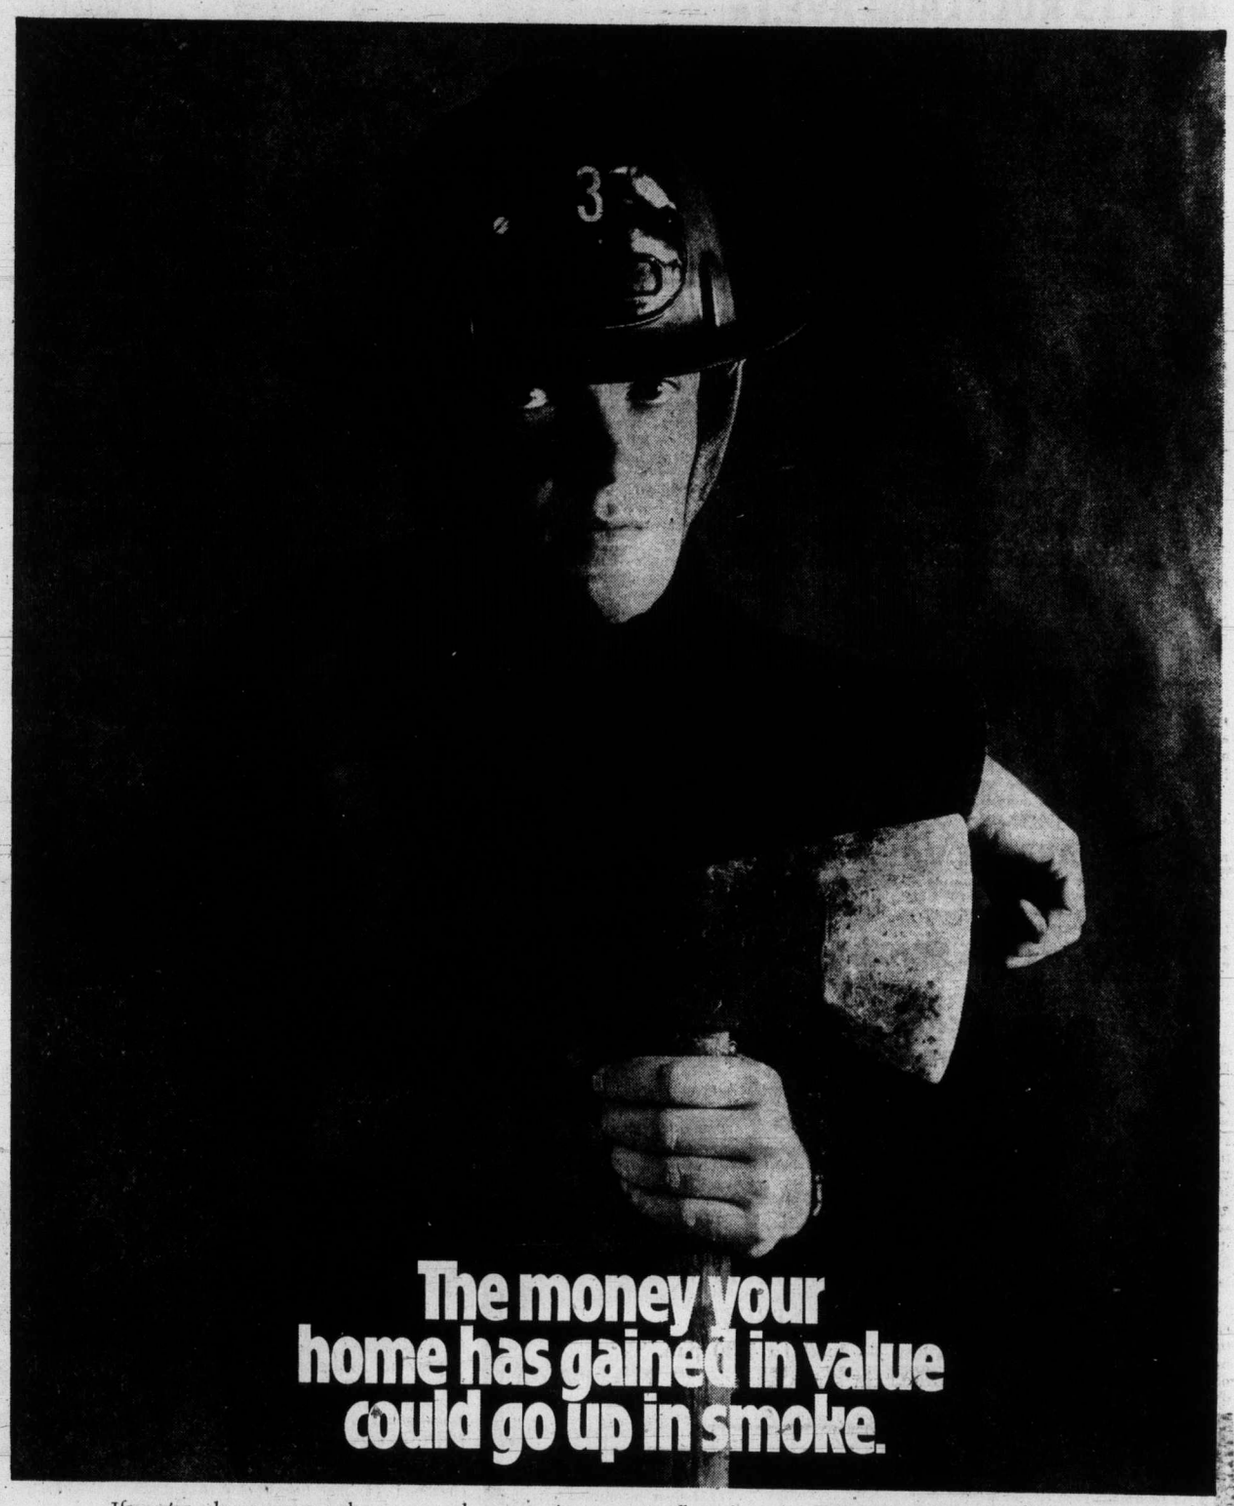

"I am not prepared to report to you on the 'status of women at city hall,' nor do I agree with the tone and some of the specific statements of your letter."

He adds that over the last 2½ years, he has received "demands from 67 action groups or pressure groups who allegedly represent certain segments of our society."

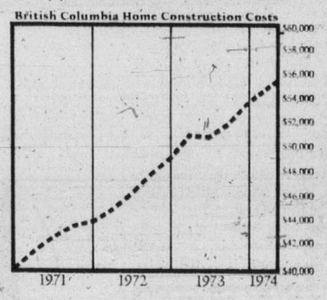

"I firmly believe that if our system of government is to be effective, these groups must participate more fully in the political process rather than endeavor to beat those in the political process to their knees."

The reply continues to state that the mayor considers his involvement in the political process to have been most rewarding. He says he believes that he has fulfilled his responsibilities to the utmost of his ability and urges the Status of Women Action Group to:

"Assume your responsibilities by entering the political process, either yourself or through people with similar views and objectives."

The money your home has gained in value could go up in smoke.

But this gain could go up in smoke if your home were destroyed by a fire.
Sure, you have insurance. But does your insurance reflect the tremendous rise in home construction cost?
That's what you'd be faced with if you had to rebuild your home. You might be in for a shock.
Home construction costs – labour and materials combined – have risen 38.5 per cent in British Columbia since early 1971.

Indians storm hill

flag. They also booed at the playing of O Canada and God Save The Queen during ceremonies which formed part of the parliamentary opening.

Chief Justice Bora Laskin had just left the Centre Block after reading the speech from the throne opening Parliament when the Indians, about 200 strong, made their second attempt to break through an RCMP line about 150 feet from the entrance of the Parliament buildings.

The unarmed Mounties, who were able to abort an earlier attempt to storm Parliament, were backed up by an armed forces group originally on the Hill as a guard of honor.

The group lined up behind the Mounties to form a wall against any Indian able to break through.

Sticks, stones and placards flew through the air as the Mounties and the Indians fought. Then the riot squad rushed out to repulse the Indians.

The Ottawa fire department also arrived on the scene as the Mounties drove the demonstrators from the Hill.

The Indians were members of the Native People's Caravan who came to Ottawa from as far away as Vancouver to seek among other things better housing, better medical care and an investigation of the Indian affairs department.

Their leaders had said it would be a peaceful demonstration but because of earlier reports from the caravan suggesting the possibility of violence, the Mounties were out in force.

For a few moments fists and a few clubs were thrown and a reserve of Mounties ran out from the Parliament buildings.

Several Indians were handcuffed and carried away.

After Chief Justice Laskin arrived on the Hill about 11:40 p.m. Victoria time, the Indians seemed content to trade good-natured banter with the RCMP.

Then one of the leaders began a 30-minute countdown for either Prime Minister Trudeau or Indian Affairs Minister Judd Buchanan to come out to talk to them.

The time limit went by and the Canadian Forces guard of honor, standing by in case of trouble, remained on the Hill.

Suddenly the Indians made their second try at rushing into the buildings and the fighting worsened. Bricks, stones, placards and other missiles flew.

The RCMP riot squad rushed into the fray and the Indians were thrown back onto the lawns, and finally off the grounds of Parliament itself.

new session — much of it from the last Parliament, which was dissolved for the July 8 election. But with the House facing a heavy load of general debate — for spending supplies, the throne speech and budget — it isn't likely that a great deal of the legislation can be processed before the new year.

In its legislative outline, most of the government's emphasis was placed on transportation, housing and consumers. Much of the legislation was revived from the last session, although government sources say there will be changes in some of the bills.

For instance, they say the anti-profiteering bill, to prevent unjustified price increases, will reappear in a revised form.

The speech, read in the ornate Senate chamber to classy-clad senators, MPs and other members of official Ottawa, said transportation must be an instrument of national purpose.

"The government does not believe the principles underlying the present transportation system or its methods of management and operation are adequate to meet current and future national aspirations."

The speech outlined a series of measures which eventually would improve ground passenger services — operating under some new still-to-be-determined agency — and better inter-city transit, plus better facilities to and from remote areas. Among other measures would be a program to create icebreaking cargo vessels for the North.

There would be a series of measures to help consumers, ranging from an overhaul of credit legislation to increasing the safety of electrical products. Homeowners would benefit from another series of measures, including a $500 grant to first-time buyers of moderately-priced houses, and more financial assistance so provinces and municipalities could do more in the field of land assembly and land servicing.

Food production would be encouraged with new incentives to farmers and fishermen, along with continued action to conserve fish stocks.

There would be greater financial support for small business, a new bankruptcy act, and manpower programs that could be applied to specific areas rather than nationally.

O Canada, with new words, will become the official national anthem, if the House agrees, and the speech also promised reforms in Parliament, perhaps even televised proceedings.

Steps would be taken to further protect the environment.

A few minutes after the chief justice completed his speech — and after many dignitaries filed out through an undignified back door to escape the shouting scenes in front — the government tabled a list of 68 bills it wants passed in this session.

But apart from the titles, little will be known until they are introduced in the House.

and income support for farmers and fishermen.

Government spokesmen said many of these promises were designed to cover the four-year life of a majority Liberal government, a point reiterated by government sources Monday.

The throne speech mentions something about many of the election promises. But voters will have to await legislation and perhaps the budget before they know just how much they will get this session.

Much of the Liberal housing promises have already been fulfilled through regulation, or will be fulfilled under provisions announced in the throne speech.

National Housing Act regulations were changed during the election campaign to make more mortgage money available for low- and moderate-income housing.

The throne speech deals with promises for a $500 payment for first-time buyers of moderately-priced housing and for changes in the Assisted Home Ownership Plan which will see more government subsidies. Of all the election promises, this one involving about $500 million, could be the most expensive.

The government transportation promises called for a new freight system, a fleet of government-owned grain cars, a $300-million, five-year urban transportation plan and a $500-million plan to improve inter-city transport and particularly rail transport.

The proposals mentioned highly sophisticated — and expensive — super buses between cities and a crown agency operating passenger services of the two major railways.

But the throne speech gives little indication of progress in these directions. It talks of such things as experimental programs designed to upgrade progressively a number of inter-city passenger services.

Team Canada welcome warm but exasperating

MOSCOW (CP) — Maple leafs sprouted on Red Square near Lenin's tomb Monday, and the effect for Team Canada 74 was almost enough to overcome a confusing hassle on arrival at Moscow's major airport.

For almost three hours, players and their wives were hung up, first to get off their Air Canada charter flight from Helsinki, second to get into the reception area, third to locate their baggage and fourth to put it on a bus for a ride of about 24 miles to the Rossiya Hotel in downtown Moscow.

At one point, Team Canada's manager, Bill Hunter of Edmonton, unleashed his famous temper. He told officials at the airport such confusion for a visiting team would not have been tolerated in Canada.

The Canadian team, close to normal after two exhibition games in three days during a respite from their eight-game international series, meets the Soviet Union here today at 9:30 a.m. Victoria time in the fifth game.

Downtown, close to the three hotels in which Canadian fans are quartered, the red maple leaf—emblematic of the Canadian flag — was easy to spot.

Occasionally, cries of "Da, Da Canada, nyet, nyet Soviet," were heard. Passing Soviet citizens treated the Canadian demonstrations with good humor.

Team Canada's problems, although anticipated to some degree, were complicated when their plane was almost an hour late leaving Helsinki for the 85-minute flight.

As a result, the aircraft was forced into a holding pattern for another half hour and the plane landed at the same time three large international flights arrived.

There were estimates that about 4000 persons were trying to use the airport facility at the same time.

Coach Billy Harris, as usual, refused to state his starting lineup for the game, but penalty-killing specialist Bruce MacGregor was a doubtful starter.

The right winger, who has been playing with Mike Walton and Paul Henderson, missed an exhibition game Friday in Helsinki because of a virus infection. He did not practise Saturday.

Goaltender Gerry Cheevers, although virtually certain to start, had an ailing groin muscle that might affect his lateral mobility. He aggravated the injury in Sunday's 4-3 victory over the Swedish national team.

He told one reporter the injury was bothering him, telling another that he was fine.

Defenceman J. C. Tremblay said Monday he is much improved from a minor tendon injury and expects to play. Tremblay and captain Pat Stapleton have been Canada's most effective defenders throughout the series.

The fifth game Thursday is also scheduled for 9:30 a.m. with the final two games of the series Saturday and Sunday, set for 8 a.m. Victoria time.

The games Thursday and Saturday will be televised in Canada over the CTV network with CBC handling the windup match Sunday.

In Sunday's game, Canada opened a first-period lead on goals by Bobby Hull, Walton and Gordie Howe, then coasted until Sweden tied the score.

Bjorn Johansonn beat Cheevers in the second period and Tord Lundstrom and Mats Ahlberg beat backup Don McLeod, 86 seconds apart in the third period.

Cheevers and McLeod finished with 30 saves, the same number as Holmvquist.

Los Angeles Dodgers will have to keep the champagne on ice for at least one more day.

The Dodgers could have captured the National League's West Division pennant with a victory Monday, but Houston pitchers Larry Dierker and Ken Forsch combined for a six-hitter and Astros downed the Dodgers, 4-1, at Houston.

The loss cut the Dodgers lead over the idle Cincinnati Reds to two games with both teams having two games left to play.

Dierker, who allowed four hits before leaving after six innings because of a stiff arm, drove in the Astros' first run with a single in the fourth inning.

The Dodgers, didn't play Sunday, but they lost half a game of their lead, when Cincinnati Reds dropped the San Francisco Giants, 7-3, at Cincinnati, with Pete Rose and Johnny Bench leading the way.

St. Louis, which had moved into a tie for first place on Sunday, stayed there Monday by stopping the Montreal Expos, 5-1, before a chilly crowd of 5337 at Montreal.

Temperatures were in the low 40s at Montreal, but that didn't seem to bother Bob Forsch, who held the Expos to three hits.

Ted Simmons gave Forsch the runs he needed with his 20th home run, a three-run shot in the first inning.

Lou Brock, didn't steal any bases, but he helped St. Louis regain a share of the lead by stealing his 118th base and driving in a run in the Cardinals' 7-3 win over Chicago on Sunday.

Pittsburgh, which managed only three hits in losing, 7-2 to New York Mets on Sunday, kept a share of first by edging the Cubs, 2-1, Monday at Pittsburgh.

Richie Zisk broke a 1-1 tie, with a triple in the seventh inning that scored Manny Sanguillen, who had singled.

Pittsburgh finishes the season at home against the Cubs, with games today and tomorrow. St. Louis' final two games are in Montreal today and tomorrow.

If a sudden-death playoff game is necessary it will be played Thursday at Pittsburgh.

Yankees need boost from lowly Tigers

Ralph Houk probably has more Yankee fans rooting for him now than he ever did when he managed New York.

Houk and his Detroit Tigers are the only ones who can stop Baltimore Orioles from capturing the East Division pennant in the American League.

With two games remaining, the Orioles moved a full game ahead of the Yankees by blasting the last-place Tigers, 12-6, Monday at Detroit.

Bobby Grich and Earl Williams drove in three runs each as the Orioles collected a total of 16 hits, 12 of them in the first four innings and jumped to a 9-2 lead over the Tigers.

The Orioles play the Tigers today and Wednesday, while the Yankees, who were idle Monday, take on the Brewers at Milwaukee in their final two games.

Houk, who managed the Yankees for 10 seasons before resigning at the end of last season to take over the Tigers, and his Detroit squad have already played the spoiler role once in the pennant race.

On Sunday the Tigers mathematically eliminated Boston by dumping the Red Sox, 7-4, at Detroit, but it was only their third victory in their last 11 games.

The Orioles were hard-pressed to maintain their lead over the Yankees on Sunday.

Sparked by Graig Nettles 21st and 22nd home runs the Yankees routed Cleveland Indians, 10-0, but Baltimore sneaked by Milwaukee, 4-3.

Yankee mates clash

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Neither Gabe Paul, president of New York Yankees, nor manager Bill Virdon is concerned about their players' hotel lobby fistfight Sunday night. In fact, they're encouraged by it.

"Fights mean that a team is on edge," Paul said of the brief skirmish between catcher Rick Dempsey and utilityman Bill Sudakis which was settled after more than half a dozen teammates jumped in to cool them off.

Although both players blamed the tight pennant race, the delay of the trip and perhaps some excessive drinking for the heated tempers, observers said the fight was started by Sudakis' needling of Dempsey, who has appeared in 42 games this year and, with Thurman Munson behind the plate, hasn't played at all in the stretch drive.

Redskins rebound, Patriots top Rams

Washington Redskins were impressive enough Monday night, but their 30-3 romp over Denver Broncos didn't come close to measuring up to the exciting National Football League product on display Sunday.

Charley Taylor caught two touchdown passes from Billy Kilmer and Mark Moseley kicked three field goals as the Redskins bounced back from an upset loss in their previous start, but this was in the line of the expected.

It was different Sunday, a day on which New England Patriots and New York Giants succeeded, and San Diego Chargers and Houston Oilers just missed, in scoring major upsets. And there were a couple or three minor surprises as well to add interest to a season which has so far been featured by the unpredictable.

Patriots, who startled the NFL world by opening the season with a 34-24 conquest of the defending-champion Miami Dolphins, indicated that may not have been quite the fluke supposed by besting the previously unbeaten Los Angeles Rams, 20-14.

It was the third win for the Patriots, who now share with St. Louis Cardinals and Minnesota Vikings the distinction of being unbeaten after three weeks, and it was accomplished before a wildly-excited crowd of 61,279 home fans.

The Rams won the statistical battle outside of the score, but the Patriots made their 13 first downs and modest yardage take them a long way because of an alert defence and an opportunistic offence led by quarterback Jim Plunkett and Mack Herron, the stumpy running back who this year is an NFL sensation.

Patriots got only 98 yards from their rushing and 151 yards from their passing, but they returned kicks for 82 yards, recovered the ball three times on Los Angeles fumbles and made two interceptions. Plunkett tossed two touchdown passes, John Smith kicked two field goals and Herron got 62 yards in 16 carries and made a 38-yard punt return which set up a field goal.

Among other Sunday highlights —

● The Giants scored touchdowns 64 seconds apart in the second quarter, and sturdy defence, which intercepted three passes and sacked quarterback Roger Staubach six times, made them stand up for a 14-6 win to the chagrin of 46,353 booing Dallas fans;

● The Cardinals got three spectacular touchdowns in a 29-7 defeat of the Cleveland Browns. Norm Thompson started them off by making a 56-yard touchdown run after an interception, then Terry Metcalf returned a punt 94 yards for a major score and Mel Gray followed by collaborating with Jim Hart on a 68-yard touchdown;

Speaking briefly

JoAnne Carner sets record for earnings

JoAnne Carner has broken the single-season earnings record for women golfers, figures released Monday in New York by the Ladies Professional Golf Association show.

Mrs. Carner won her sixth tournament of the year in Portland during the weekend, bringing her official LPGA winnings for the year to $84,019, $2,000 more than Kathy Whitworth's 1973 record.

A former five-time U.S. amateur champion, Mrs. Carner had earned only $74,744 in her first three years on the women's pro tour.

Helped by an eagle on the seventh hole, Mrs. Carner finished with 71-211, three strokes ahead of Donna Caponi Young to earn $5,000. Sandra Haynie was third at 216. Canadian Jocelyne Bourassa had a final-round 72 for 227.

Skipper of India XI retires

Wadekar led India in 16 Test matches, winning four, losing four and drawing eight. His fame reached a peak when he triumphantly led the India side against England and the West Indies in 1971 and against the Marylebone Cricket Club of England in India in 1973. But his 1974 team lost all three test matches against England.

Wadekar completed 10,000 runs in first-class cricket. He was awarded the best fielder and the best batsman prize in England in 1971.

Oak Bay ties unbeaten Reynolds

Reynolds Roadrunners are still unbeaten, but they're beginning to find points harder to come by.

Reynolds hung on through an Oak Bay rally in the final 15 minutes of the game and came away with a 1-1 tie in an Inter-high school soccer league game Monday at Oak Bay.

It was the first time the Roadrunners had failed to win and the third straight time they had been held to two goals or less. In their first four games the Roadrunners averaged six goals a game and allowed just one.

Reynolds had the better of the play in the first half, but excellent goalkeeping by Oak Bay's Scott McDonald helped the Bays emerge from the first half with a scoreless tie.

Drew Finerty with his sixth goal of the season put Reynolds ahead, 1-0, at the 15-minute mark of the second half, but Pete Zachary tied the game, with a brilliant goal eight minutes from time.

In other games Monday, Belmont Braves edged Esquimalt Dockers, 2-1, at Esquimalt; Vic High Tyees blanked the visiting Mt. Douglas Rams, 3-0; and Claremont Spartans and Parkland Panthers played to a 2-2 tie at Parkland.

At Vic High, the Tyees scored three times in the final 15 minutes and moved into fourth place in the standings. Ron McGovern, Charlie Davis and Henry Wong were the scorers.

At Claremont, Mike Nosse scored at 30 minutes of the second half to give Parkland the tie. Rudy Henry had put Parkland ahead in the first half, but the Spartans came back with goals by Dave Scotney and Doug Burns.

Lions regain share of lead with solid win over Ticats

VANCOUVER—B.C. Lions are battling for first place in the Western Football Conference but their fans are still taking a "wait-and-see" approach.

Only 23,420 spectators were at sun-filled Empire Stadium on Sunday to see the Lions score their second straight home victory, a 32-10 pasting of Hamilton Tiger-Cats, and move into a first-place deadlock with Edmonton Eskimos.

Using a well-balanced running and passing attack, Lions were in command for most of the game but it wasn't until midway through the third quarter that they actually took control.

Following a series of punts, Lions got possession on their 42-yard line and quarterback Don Moorhead, calling a checkoff play, hit receiver Jim Young for a 68-yard scoring strike that put the Lions into a 22-10 lead.

Making his first start since suffering a shoulder separation several weeks ago, Young gathered in the ball at the Hamilton 45 and was pulling away from defenders when he crossed the goal line. The star receiver was playing with his shoulder in a harness that prevented him from raising his arm above shoulder level. But Young still helped out with crunching downfield blocking to aid on two scoring drives.

"That was the play that turned it around for us," Moorhead said of the pass to Young.

But it was a second-quarter play involving Moorhead and halfback Monroe Eley that had the crowd roaring.

Moorhead completed a pass for about 20 yards and Eley, evading blockers and breaking tackles, raced another 72 yards for the longest scoring play from scrimmage in the CFL this season.

It was the second touchdown for the flashy halfback, who took a pitchout in from 14 yards on the opening play of the second quarter to overcome a 3-1 deficit.

Eley amassed 125 yards on 14 carries and added another 113 on three pass receptions.

Running-mate Lou Harris charged for 76 yards on 22 carries and his 10th touchdown tops in the CFL to take his season's rushing total to 898 yards in 11 games.

Harris scored the touchdown from the Hamilton 11-yard line, when he burst through tacklers on a third-and-two situation, late in the third quarter.

Moorhead, still to gain the full support of Vancouver fans, turned in his second straight solid effort, completing 10 of 16 passes and, for the second game in a row, not having a pass intercepted.

And while the offence took most of the glory, the B.C. defence came up with another stellar effort, shutting out the opposition in the second half for the second consecutive game.

Hamilton managed a first-quarter field goal by Ian Sunter that followed a Lion fumble and a 23-yard scoring toss from Bill Etter to Garney Henley in the second quarter.

Veteran Don Jonas replaced Etter midway through the third quarter but had his second pass attempt picked off by Wayne Matherne, who returned the ball to the Hamilton 48. Harris scored eight plays later.

Hamilton managed 19 first downs to the Lions' 16 but B.C. held a wide edge in total offence, 489 yards to 308, 219-88 in rushing and 270-246 through the air.

The victory gave B.C. a 7-4 record, the first time in 10 years that the Lions have managed seven wins. The last time they accomplished the feat was in 1964, the only year Lions have won the Grey Cup.

Canucks on target

Vancouver Canucks came up with their strongest showing of the National Hockey League exhibition season Sunday, downing Pittsburgh Penguins, 9-6, before 2,742 fans at Memorial Arena.

Paulin Bordeleau, Jim Wiley and Jim Mair were the other Canuck marksmen while Jean Pronovost (2), Bob Kelly (2), Ron Shock and Chuck Arnason scored for the Penguins.

Toronto tops Ottawa Riders whip Stamps

Toronto Argonauts revived their slim playoff hopes in the Eastern Conference by rallying for a 19-7 win over Ottawa Rough Riders but Calgary Stampeders had the Western Conference chances all but obliterated when Saskatchewan Roughriders charged to a 34-10 victory.

The Argonaut victory — only their first in five games — left Toronto two points behind Ottawa but the Argos still have a game in hand on the defending Grey Cup champions.

Two second-quarter interceptions turned the game around for Toronto.

Defence-back Wayne Allison picked off a Jerry Keeling pass midway through the third quarter and returned the ball 65 yards to the Ottawa 25-yard line.

Two plays later Mike Rae threw the first of two touchdown passes — a seven-yarder to Larry Simpson.

An interception by Tim Anderson late in the fourth quarter led to the other major score, Rae passing 33 yards to Chuck Herd.

Riders, who were playing before 18,902 fans at Lansdowne Park — the best crowd in three Ottawa games — could only manage a pair of field goals by Gerry Organ and a Dick Adams single.

In Regina, quarterback Ron Lancaster, injured last week in a game in Ottawa, bounced back to throw four touchdown passes that helped leave the Stamps four points behind fourth-place Winnipeg and six behind Saskatchewan in the battle for the final playoff spot.

Calgary has a game in hand on the Riders but has played one more than the Bombers.

OHA rejects rule urged by report

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Hockey Association voted overwhelmingly Sunday at a mass meeting to rescind the rule calling for automatic ejection of a player from the game following assessment of a fighting major penalty.

The rule was initiated as a result of recommendations made by a provincial inquiry into violence in amateur hockey, headed by Toronto lawyer William McMurtry and held earlier this year. It was rejected Sunday by a 102-to-22 margin by members of the OHA executive and team delegates.

The consensus was that the rule encouraged more serious forms of violence and increased the incidence of injury.

Delegates voted to revert to the previous rule, for the time being at least, which calls for a game misconduct and a two-game suspension for any player assessed two major penalties in one game.

Cougars find help but Leslie injured

There was both good and bad news for Victoria Cougars on Monday and it enabled coach and general manager Pat Ginnell to almost settle on his opening-game lineup.

First, the good news.

Cougars have signed a promising rightwinger who will be in uniform when the Western Canada Hockey League squad opens its season Friday in New Westminster and plays its home opener the following night against Edmonton Oil Kings.

He's 18-year-old Bob Nault, who scored 30 goals for Kenora Thistles of the Manitoba Junior Hockey League last season. Nault was a teammate of Jim Gustafson, a centre who's impressed Ginnell since opening day of training camp last month.

Nault, Dan Lucas and Curt Fraser will play the right side in the opening game, with Rick Peter, a defenceman who was moved to right wing for pre-season games, shifting to the left side to replace rookie Clint Eccles.

Ginnell sent Eccles, who played eight games for the Cougars last season, and rookie-defenceman Dan Roulston to Nanaimo Clippers, the Cougar affiliate in the B.C. Junior Hockey League for further seasoning.

Now the bad news.

Goalkeeper Bob Leslie, acquired from Regina Pats several weeks ago and figured to be the No. 1 netminder this season, will be lost for about two weeks.

That leaves Ginnell with 19-year-old Lloyd Saar, a regular last season with Kamloops Chiefs, and Saanich-product Dan Rogers, a 17-year-old who was ticketed for Nanaimo before Leslie's injury, as the netminders.

Cougars now have 20 players on the active roster — 12 forwards, six defencemen and two goalkeepers.

That number may be reduced by one today when Ginnell and defenceman Kim Clackson appear before league president Ed Chynoweth in Calgary.

Clackson was suspended pending a hearing, last week when he was involved in an incident during an exhibition game with Kamloops in Revelstoke.

Burrell wins Uplands title

In 1969 Keith Burrell won the trophy for being the most improved golfer at Uplands Golf Club.

Today he is the club champion.

Oak Bay Farmer Construction is well on its way to a second straight undefeated season in the Vancouver Island juvenile football league.

Christie Sinclare scored three touchdowns and kicked three converts to lead Oak Bay to its sixth straight victory this season, a 35-7 romp over Saanich Vampires at Centennial Stadium Sunday.

Oak Bay has now won 12 straight league games and Sinclare leads the league in scoring with 10 touchdowns and 17 converts for 77 points.

Brucey Vye and Al Gray scored the other Farmer touchdowns and the defence collected a safety touch. Al Bowack scored the Vampire touchdown, which was converted by Paul Molholm.

In Sunday's other game, Cowichan Timbermen rallied from a 14-0 half-time deficit to edge James Bay Mustangs, 15-14, at Royal Athletic Park.

Bernie Crump scored one touchdown, Bill Galego added a touchdown and two converts to give James Bay the first half lead, but Cowichan came back with a touchdown and single by Mike Jones, a touchdown by Ron Bronson and two converts by Kim McCauley.

Lomas too potent

Vancouver Meralomas are bad news for everybody, but for the Victoria Dolphins they're murder. Maralomas, unbeaten in five league games, trounced the Dolphins, 71-0, in a Big Four Junior Football League game at Empire Stadium on the weekend.

Earlier this season the Meralomas defeated the Dolphins, 72-0, and in two games last season they beat Victoria, 69-0, and 51-3.

Two Dolphins suffered injuries in the contest.

Defence-back Rory Campbell was in satisfactory condition Monday at Vancouver General Hospital, after suffering a neck injury on a first-quarter tackle.

A hospital spokesman said there was no proof of a fracture — it was believed Campbell had a broken neck — and said Campbell spent a very good night and is feeling fine.

Defence-lineman Frank McGeachie spent Saturday night at Vancouver General and was released Sunday morning. McGeachie suffered a severe concussion late in the first half and collapsed while coming off the field.

Eighth win of year gives Miller record

NAPA, Calif. (AP) — Johnny Miller says he hopes, in a few years, to attain the stature and professional competence now known by Jack Nicklaus.

"I'm not that good yet," Miller, 27, insists. "I hope to keep on improving.

"I don't know why I shouldn't. I'd like to be able to, in a few years, maybe when I'm in my mid-30s, to be where Jack is now."

But the fact of the matter is that Miller already has achieved a couple of professional golfing plateaus unreached even by Nicklaus, regarded as perhaps the finest player the game has ever known.

Miller broke Nicklaus' all-time single-season money-winning record last Sunday when he collected the $30,000 first prize in the Kaiser International, pushing his earnings for the year to $346,000.

It was his eighth victory of the season on the PGA tour and represented the greatest number of triumphs in a year since Arnold Palmer won eight in 1960.

Miller won this one by eight strokes, matching the biggest victory margin on the tour this season, with a six-under-par 66 in the final round and a 271 total, a distant 17 under par on the 6819-yard course.

He moved into a share of the lead with a hole-in-one on the second hole of Saturday's third round and put it out of reach with some fine putting in Sunday's final round. He one-putted seven times on the front nine, once holing from 60 feet, on his way to a 31.

PGA champ Lee Trevino finished with a final 67 and tied 43-year-old Billy Casper for second at 279. Casper, the leader through the first two rounds, had a final 72. Leonard Thompson took fourth alone at 69-280.

Bob Panasiuk of Windsor, Ont., shot 75 Saturday and 74 Sunday for a total of 285, good for $954.

Three-way race in field hockey

There's a three-way tussle for the lead after three weekends of action in the Vancouver Island Men's Field Hockey Association.

Castaways and Rebels are tied for the lead with Tigers close behind, and all three scored victories Sunday to keep the race close.

Rebels stopped University of Victoria Vikings, 1-0, on a goal by Craig Wilson and shutout netminding by Keith White.

And in the final game, Castaways II — now to be known as the Colonials — stopped Red Barons, 5-1. Gary Jones (2), John Money, Steve Murphy and Ron Vincent scored for Colonials and Stu Thomson scored for Red Barons.

P.S. Beat the energy crisis — there is sufficient driftwood on the shoreline to keep the fireplace burning forever!

If you're thinking of buying a new car, you may need a new kind of fuel. Esso 2000 Unleaded gasoline. Developed by Esso research to match the performance requirements of today's engines.

For all '75's with a catalytic converter, unleaded gas is a must. The car manufacturers will tell you that. Even if unleaded gas is not specified, Esso 2000, can still be beneficial to your new car. Here's why:

With regular use over an extended period of time Esso 2000 Unleaded can keep critical components of your engine cleaner, especially if used from the beginning of your car's life. Esso 2000 gasoline contains special detergent additives which help maintain carburetor cleanliness. These additives control deposits that may interfere with combustion efficiency.

Regular use of Esso 2000 Unleaded also means longer spark plug life. Mufflers last longer, too. Which means that if you start with Esso 2000 and stay with Esso 2000, lower maintenance costs can be expected over the life of your car.

In addition to those useful benefits, it's nice to know that Esso 2000 Unleaded gasoline can help maintain exhaust emission standards. Overall, the result is a more efficient, smoother-running engine.

What if you drive an older car? Check your owner's manual. Many '71 and later cars can use unleaded gas as well. For those cars Esso 2000 Unleaded can help extend spark plug and muffler life.

Meanwhile, if you're heading for the new car showrooms, Esso 2000 Unleaded is the name to remember. The new fuel for the new cars.

RCMP caught in security dilemma

Tories will demand inquiry

Canadian Press

The Toronto Sun says the Progressive Conservative opposition will make a formal demand in the House of Commons for a royal commission inquiry into the recent dismissal of two RCMP anti-espionage officers.

The newspaper quotes Gerald Baldwin, opposition house leader, as saying "there is no way the government or the RCMP are going to be able to sweep this under the rug."

Leading the expected debate will be Erik Nielsen, veteran PC critic on RCMP and other federal security and police matters, the Sun says.

At issue is the dismissal of S. Sgt. Don McCleery and Sgt. Gilles Brunet, both long-service members of the security and intelligence division of the RCMP in Montreal.

Last week, the two dropped their court case in Ottawa appealing their dismissal. Their lawyer said revelation of certain RCMP documents, which he said contained misinformation, give his clients little chance to defend themselves.

The newspaper quotes Mr. Baldwin as saying:

"When they dropped their case and their lawyer urged that the documents be returned to the RCMP without public release, the whole thing left a bad taste in the mouths of the Canadian public.

"We are not interested in any witchhunt, but the RCMP is too vital a security and top federal police force for us to allow this to be buried."

Meanwhile, secret documents concerning the two former RCMP sergeants were in the force's files Monday following Friday's Federal Court order they be returned to the RCMP.

Reasons for that order, released Monday, gave weight to maintaining the secrecy of the documents which published accounts alleged concerned security matters, but expressed concern about suspicions aroused by requests for such secrecy.

Another issue has arisen from published allegations that the documents mentioned two undercover United States agents apparently in Montreal.

The president of an engineering company in Montreal said he asked Justice Minister Arthur Lang Monday for release of any information in RCMP or justice department files on the bugging of his home or business telephones.

William Power, president of the Weather Engineering Corp., said his telephone was bugged last August while he was involved in sensitive discussions in Washington.

Finger points to red face

He had to call the fire department to rescue his finger from the steering wheel of his car.

A fire department official explained that the man's finger had become jammed in a hole in the spoke of the racing-style steering wheel.

A fire department rescue team was unable to get the finger free, so it removed the steering wheel and took it, with the somewhat embarrassed driver still attached, to the nearest hospital.

This is a hand-held calculator for businessmen, engineers, scientists and students who require problem-solving capacity over a broad spectrum of mathematical functions. There is no other machine available that can match the versatility of the SR-36 at anything like the price! It operates in algebraic logic, using non-scientific notation at all times unless the size or complexity of the readout requires an exponential expression, when it automatically switches to scientific notation. It has a memory bank, logarithmic and trigonometric functions, and two levels of parenthesis which enable it to store additional data until each level of parenthesis is closed.

- 14-digit display: 10-digit mantissa, 2-digit exponent, 2 signs.
- Common or scientific notation.
- Two levels of parenthesis.
- Algebraic logic, log, and trig. functions.
- Shelf memory bank.
- Pi key, square root key, exchange key, e^x key.
- Degree or radian key, reciprocal key.
- y^x ability to raise to fractional powers.
- Operates on rechargeable nickel/cadmium batteries or AC power.

PROVINCIAL COURT

Eleven persons were called Monday morning in Victoria Provincial Court on charges of impaired driving during the weekend—the largest one-day total of such charges in traffic court in several months.

Ten of the charges were laid by Victoria police with the 11th from Saanich officers. One of the 11 failed to show up, four were remanded for plea or trials and six pleaded guilty with Judge F. S. Green imposing a total of $2,075 in fines.

Victoria police said outside court there was no weekend crackdown on suspected impaired drivers and had no reason for the largest arrest total other than, as one officer put it, "a lot of drivers must have been drinking."

Court sources said the largest number of impaired-driving arrests on one day's traffic docket in recent years was 15.

In the court section of Judge William Ostler, Jan. 6 was set as the date for preliminary hearing of a charge against Eric Donald Huntley, 24, of 1230 Fort, of criminal negligence causing death.

The charge was laid following the death of Robert Wayne Pritchard, 24, of 2898 Colquitz, after a two-car accident Aug. 17 at Blanshard and Hillside. Huntley elected trial before judge and jury.

Two T-shirts cost $100 for Harold Irwin Behm, 20, of 1007 Empress, who pleaded guilty to a Victoria charge of theft involving less than $200.

Prosecutor Gordon Macdonald told Ostler that Behm took the two shirts, worth a total of $3, when he visited a girlfriend who was babysitting July 16 at a Victoria home.

Behm told the judge he had been "looking all over town trying to buy some T-shirts, the black ones, so I took them." He was fined $100.

Bail was set at $1,000 by Ostler for Clifford James Maluorno, 22, of Vancouver, on a charge of possession of marijuana Saturday in Victoria for the purpose of trafficking. He was remanded to next Monday for further hearing.

Threat to kill waitress topic of court report

The case of a Saanich cocktail waitress who was so frightened that she had to have police protection will become the subject of a pre-sentence report by a probation officer, Judge William Ostler ruled Monday in Victoria Provincial Court.

Richard Daniel Ryser, 21, of 741 Daffodil, was remanded by Ostler to Oct. 18 for the pre-sentence report and sentence after a plea of guilty to a charge of common assault Sept. 10 at the Royal Oak Inn, 4676 Elk Lake.

Prosecutor Gordon Macdonald said a cocktail waitress in the Inn asked Ryser to leave because of profane language. He said Ryser refused and the waitress asked a kitchen cook for help.

Macdonald quoted a police report as saying Ryser told the 1 p.m. cocktail lounge patrons that "all persons in the bar would be dead soon . . . he had friends and would return with a gun."

As the cook was acting as an escort to the door, said Maconald, Ryser touched the waitress' forehead and said: "You're dead, baby, you will all be dead by Friday" (Sept. 10 was a Tuesday).

In the next few days, said the prosecutor, the waitress received "three phone calls saying she would be dead by Friday. She was genuinely afraid and had to have police protection."

Ryser told Ostler that "I'm sorry I got that far out of hand" but added he was drinking Sept. 10 and didn't remember making any phone calls later in the week.

The judge wondered if he should impose sentence at once. Macdonald suggested a report, and Ostler said "it may be well to have a probation officer look into it."

'Ordinary Joes' seek candidates

A group of Victoria residents calling themselves "just ordinary people" have called a public meeting tonight to work toward nominating candidates in the Nov. 16 municipal election.

Joan Johnston, 270 Simcoe, head of an ad-hoc citizens committee, said the group represents people from all Victoria neighborhoods who want "to make sure Victoria is a city for people.

"We object to the way decisions are made at city hall in secret and without taking into consideration the wishes of the people.

"We don't have any celebrities, just ordinary people." Mrs. Johnston said. "We aren't sure how broad our support is and that is why we have called a public meeting."

The meeting will be held at 7:30 in the Newcombe auditorium board room at the Provincial Museum.

A pamphlet being distributed by the committee calls for an alternative to "the control of city hall by real estate developers."

Mrs. Johnston says the committee intends to nominate several candidates and will also support any candidates nominated by the Capital Region Tenants Association.

She added, however, that the group wants to remain broadly based and does not wish to function as a political party.

Child dead before hunt got started

Gorst
. . . $97,000 cheque

The naked body of a lost child was found Sunday afternoon after a six-day search in rugged bushland west of Shawnigan Lake.

Two-year-old Yehudi Prior apparently died of fatigue and cold the night of Monday, Sept. 23, before an all-out search got underway, according to searchmaster Hal Orrick.

His body was found about four miles from where he went missing in an area not previously searched because it was thought a young child would not have travelled so far.

"We were told Saturday night (Sept. 28) that he might have wandered off earlier than we had previously heard," said Orrick, "and that is why we widened the search area.

"He had wandered off over a small ridge into the next valley and headed down to Holt Creek, perhaps thinking it was Wild Deer Creek where he lived.

"There were footprints on the logging road near where we found him, and if we had been called in Monday afternoon when he was first missed, I would have driven in that way and might have seen him on the road.

"I've been involved in this kind of thing for years, but I suppose you never get hardened to a thing like finding a baby's body."

The child had apparently taken off his T-shirt, which was the only garment he wore when he disappeared from a berry-picking expedition with his father William Prior.

As many as 60 volunteers and five tracker dogs combed the dense bush of Wild Deer Creek at the height of the search last week.

It was a final effort by about 20 searchers, many from Nanaimo, which recovered the body beside Holt Creek on Sunday.

Prior had reported his son missing to Shawnigan RCMP about 5 p.m. Monday Sept. 23, saying the child had been missing since about 3 p.m. He said he would search the area himself before asking for assistance.

Nature centre helped

Saanich municipality received a provincial government cheque for $97,000 Monday from Esquimalt MLA James Gorst to buy land for the Swan Lake-Christmas Hill nature centre.

In making the presentation, Gorst complimented the B.C. Land Commission which, he said, recommended purchase of the land.

Additional funds for the centre are expected to come from the provincial government's Green Belt Fund and the federal government's Nature Second Century Fund.

The centre will contain 175 acres, of which 21 are taken up by Swan Lake. Saanich has bought 54 acres and will buy another 21. The Greater Victoria school board has agreed in principle to provide 8.18 and the rest will be bought with funds either received or yet to come.

So much for drive-in garage

Moral: Do it yourself

A helping hand on moving day

It was dark and somewhat damp Monday night in the Morin house, 2748 Prior, Victoria, and the problem couldn't be solved without danger of the house falling down.

Arthur Morin was expecting a moving van to come and pick up a piece of furniture from the basement. A young friend (who prefers to be nameless) volunteered to move a car out of the way in the driveway to the drive-in garage.

Somehow the car got out of control, shot into and through the basement, and halfway through the far wall.

Its path broke the water main and the pole bringing electricity into the house, and left the entire building resting on the car's roof beside the electrical breaker box.

The moving van came and got the furniture—after the water had been turned off from the broken main.

Morin plans to have the house shored up today so the car can be moved and necessary repairs carried out.

Government asked to cut spending

Senior citizens criticize over-run

Senior citizens on fixed incomes will be driven out of their homes unless municipalities cut spending to the minimum, an Oak Bay woman warned Monday night.

Many elderly persons are having trouble meeting steadily-increasing property taxes, and municipal spending should be cut to the "bare essentials," Jane Hall, 356 Newport, told about 100 people at a town hall meeting sponsored by Oak Bay council.

She criticized the provincial government for allowing a $100 million over-run in the human resources department and said the Oak Bay share of the extra cost, which one alderman estimated could amount to about $80,000, would be hard to raise.

"Oak Bay doesn't have that kind of cash," she said.

After she complained that the cost of the recreational complex now under construction was a "pretty hefty load to carry," Ald. Doug Watts explained that Oak Bay will have to cover only $1.2 million of the $3 million total cost. The rest of the money will be provided by the provincial and federal governments.

The complex is expected to open next year, and Mayor Brian Smith told the meeting it will probably operate at a loss.

However, he added, the provincial government is "more than generous" with recreational grants and has indicated that operating grants might be available.

Miss Hall also had some unkind words for the Canadian Union of Public Employees which unsuccessfully asked council for a mid-contract $100 a month across-the-board raise.

"I, for one am not one to accede to the requests of unions and get forced from my home," she said.

She asked when all Greater Victoria municipalities will begin regional bargaining with CUPE and other unions and was told by Smith that the municipalities have agreed in principle to the proposal.

Regional bargaining would end "blackmail settlements," the mayor said.

City's PR campaign to sell mall plans

Wednesday is Sell-the-Mall Day.

To dispel any doubts about desirability of the proposed Government Street semi-pedestrian mall, Victoria city council is starting an elaborate public relations campaign.

Throughout the day, information sessions will be conducted by the city's planning, engineering and traffic departments.

The first meeting will start at 9:30 a.m. in the city hall council chamber. There will be slides showing the concept, drawings of how the traffic will be handled and, most of all, the city's technical personnel will answer questions.

There will be three or four sessions during the day. Each one will deal with a particular section of the proposed mall and merchants and property owners in that section have been invited to attend the sessions.

At night, starting at 7:30, there will be, according to Ald. Michael Young, "a free-for-all" session which the public is invited to attend.

Young said the information sessions wouldn't have political overtones.

"In other words, it's not going to be an 'ask-your-favorite-alderman' affair," Young said in an interview Monday.

He said city staff would be able to answer all the questions people ever wanted to know but were afraid to ask about the proposed mall.

"There will be detailed drawings showing where the loading bays will be. The plans will show where we'll plant the trees and where we'll put the planters," he said.

Young stressed again that the information sessions wouldn't be a politically-motivated "sell meetings." He added that approval of property owners wasn't necessary because the city was paying for all the work, estimated to cost close to $1 million.

The proposed mall is to stretch along government from Humboldt to Yates. Existing sidewalks will be doubled in width, reducing the four traffic lanes to two.

Trees will be planted on both sides of Government and benches and planters will be installed.

Council has abandoned the original concept of building an informal mall or, as Young put it," a country-in-the-middle-of-town type of mall."

Plans call instead for a more dignified mall "with shapely, manicured trees," Young said.

Some opposition to the proposed mall has come from segments of the business community. The Downtown Victoria Association and the Downtown Business Association have urged council to shelve the mall proposal for several months.

Both groups have warned that the mall would displace existing parking and cause traffic congestion in the downtown area, all of which would have detrimental effects on downtown merchants.

But the aldermen have replied that these objections should have been voiced a year ago when the mall concept was first announced.

King
. . . sees action

Elevator firms' 'no' concern to King

Labor Minister William King said Monday he was concerned over the stand taken by the companies in the elevator workers' dispute.

King indicated the companies had told him they did not intend to accept the recommendations of an industrial inquiries commission concerning the dispute.

"I view this," King said, "as a violation of the companies' written commitment to me. I am disappointed that they appear prepared to violate that commitment.

"The government will have to consider whatever action may be necessary unless the companies review their position."

If Dayliner's losing close it—alderman

By HUBERT BEYER
Colonist Reporter

Charges of "grandstanding and cheap politics" were levelled Monday at Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen by Ald. Malcolm Anderson.

The disagreement between Pollen and Anderson is over whether Victoria city council should oppose an application by Canadian Pacific to discontinue its passenger rail service between Victoria and Courtenay on Vancouver Island.

Anderson said in an interview Monday the mayor's determination to fight the application was "a cheap shot" but Pollen countered in a separate interview that Anderson doesn't know what he's talking about.

Anderson said if CP could no longer operate the service on an economical basis, it should be allowed to discontinue the run.

He said the service was hardly used by anyone, "except by some Indians who can travel at half-price."

Anderson stressed that scrapping the passenger run didn't necessarily mean losing the right-of-way. But even if that were the case, Anderson said, it wouldn't be disastrous.

There would never be a need for a commuter service to Victoria that might make the right-of-way a desirable feature.

"The regional plan shoots that down. According to the regional plan, Victoria will eventually have a population of 300,000 and you don't need a commuter service for 300,000 people," he said.

Anderson accused Pollen of exercising a double standard with regard to transportation. He pointed out that city council "just barely" supported an application by Air West Airlines Ltd., to extend its passenger flight service between Victoria and Seattle.

"Council can't continue to speak with forked tongue when it comes to transportation. We are either for transportation or against it," he said.

Angered by Anderson's stand, Pollen said the alderman "doesn't know what he's talking about.

"The city is simply trying to make CP fulfill its obligations to the community of Vancouver Island," he said.

Region may take over water supply control

Capital Region Board chairman James Campbell told a Sidney public meeting monday night that water supply will probably soon come under control of the regional board.

He told an audience of about 50 that the regional board now does not have jurisdiction in supplying fresh water to municipalities in the region.

Campbell hinted the board would only get control if municipal councils passed the board's regional plan for development and growth of the entire area.

Sidney Mayor Stanley Dear said the cost of bringing Sooke Lake water to Sidney will be between $4 and $6 million.

Dear also told the meeting, sponsored by town council to explain the plan, that all members of his council had "expressed misgivings" about it.

Dear said council feared that, if the regional plan was adopted, council would lose its autonomy. He also told the meeting that Sidney could not afford to bring Sooke Lake water to the town and foot the bill on its own.

Campbell suggested Sidney council vote to have the regional plan adopted, then lay the responsibility for the supply of fresh water on the region as a whole.

New building in the town has been virtually frozen for the past year because of the limited amount of water.

Campbell told the meeting the regional plan is "simply setting guidelines" for orderly growth in the Capital Region and does not take away the autonomy of councils.

He said it was "an open ended affair" and the projected growth of the region to the year 2001 is subject to review every five years.

Was it or not? Only the pilot knows for sure

Did you see an apparent UFO Monday night — something displaying a pulsating red light as it flew over Saanich Peninsula, not too fast?

Many did, and deluged radio stations, newspapers and even Pacific Rescue Centre with telephone queries.

Said a centre spokesman:

"We didn't see it. Anyway, while conceding it's interesting, we would only be concerned if the UFO were in trouble and asked for our help."

"Many small aircraft," a spokesman there said, "now carry a rotating red light mounted on the plane's tail for added visibility at night, in addition to their wingtip lights.

"One of these was up Monday night, and apparently switched on the rotating light, forgetting for a time to put on its wingtip lights. We're sure that's what people saw. When the pilot realized all his lights were not on, he soon added the wingtip illumination."

Gorden Head residents:

A flat No to flats

Apartments and townhouses are not wanted by residents in the Gordon Head district, according to a mail survey done by the Gordon Head Ratepayers' Association.

Preliminary results of the survey, released Monday by association president Barrie Goult, showed that 80 per cent of the 733 replies did not consider apartments an "acceptable land use" in Gordon Head, even if they are "well-designed and properly located."

Only 13 per cent did not object to apartments and 7 per cent had no opinion.

Townhouses were considered acceptable by only 21 per cent, with 75 per cent opposed and 4 per cent with no opinion.

Duplexes, however, were not quite so objectionable — 50 per cent of those answering the questionnaire considered them acceptable, compared with 45 per cent against them and 5 per cent with no opinion.

Goult said the survey results — which are being sent to Saanich council — clearly indicate "the people of Gordon Head want to retain the amenities they're used to."

Most residents moved into the district because it was an area of single-family homes, Goult added, and apparently a large majority want to see it remain that way.

He said the survey was distributed in August to most households in Gordon Head, including homes, apartments and townhouses.

Girl cyclist hurt in crash

Cyclist Kelly Hubman, 950 Edge, in Saanich, was in collision Monday afternoon with a vehicle driven by Arthur Reedy, 660 Jones, at the intersection of Interurban and Marigold.

Foster move confirmed

Dr. Bristol Foster confirmed Monday night that he will be leaving his position as director of the Provincial Museum in Victoria to head the province's new Ecological Reserves Program.

The program was established by the Legislature in 1971 to set up as many as 100 reserves in B.C. by 1975 to protect areas that are still largely untouched by man.

Foster said 55 of the reserves have already been established, the largest being 23,000 acres on the west coast of the Queen Charlotte Islands. Many more are under study.

I saw an ad in the paper the other day that intrigued me. It said simply, "WANTED: Christian woman to do ironing."

Is there any other kind who irons?

If someone had told me before I got married that I would stand like a statue for six hours every week in front of a board with three pounds of steam and heat in my right hand and push it back and forth over a sweatshirt, I would have called off the wedding.

I once lived next door to a Christian woman who ironed. Every Monday she would put up her ironing board and wheel out one of those baskets on legs and iron each piece as it came. I could have watched her for hours.

She ironed sheets, dish towels, socks, belt buckles, underwear, the tongue in tennis shoes, the binding on blankets and even zippers. I never saw such a martyr. One day I couldn't believe my eyes. She pulled her husband's shirt out of the basket and after painstakingly ironing both sides of the collar and cuffs, she ironed the front and started to iron the back.

"Are you crazy?" I shouted, ripping the shirt off the board. "Now you've gone too far."

"What are you talking about?" she asked.

"Ironing the back of a man's shirt. Are you bucking for canonization?"

It is just not woman's natural inclination to take to ironing. One of my friends hired a woman to iron after the birth of her fourth child. She still retains her and the kid is 35 years old now.

Some hold theories that the aversion to ironing is genetic. This would seem to be the case as both my sister and I iron only during the months when oysters are in season — off the coast of Thailand.

Our phone conversations run something like this:

"Joe needs a shirt."

"You going to iron one?"

"No, make one."

"When are you going to iron?"

"During the next space launch, providing the month has an R in it."

I'll tell you something, world. When you are as behind in your ironing as I am, you'd settle for a woman who worshipped avocados during a full moon!

Officer stalls suicide jump

San Francisco (UPI) — A 23-year-old unemployed laborer climbed up on a main cable of the Golden Gate bridge but was talked out of jumping by a California highway patrolman. The would-be jumper said he was having trouble with his girlfriend and family. Officer C. R. Holmes said he convinced the man to crawl down the cable to safety. He was taken to Mount Zion hospital for observation.

Haig will take new U.S. post

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Alexander M. Haig Jr., once the most powerful aide in the White House, has quietly gotten back into uniform. After a vacation with his wife, Haig will assume command of all U.S. military forces in Europe Nov. 1, replacing Gen. Andrew Goodpaster in Brussels. He will also serve as supreme NATO military commander.

Mrs. Graham cringes at label

America's most powerful woman

By PATRICIA McCORMACK

NEW YORK (UPI) — Katharine Graham is "the most powerful woman in America," says Ms. magazine in its October issue.

Mrs. Graham cringes at the label, saying "it makes me think of a female weight lifter."

Mrs. Graham, publisher of the Washington Post in the U.S. capital, is responsible for a $247 million communications conglomerate, says Jane Howard who wrote the Ms. cover story.

Mrs. Graham is head of the Post Company which owns six broadcasting stations, Newsweek and its several subsidiaries, a news service shared with the Los Angeles Times, part of the International Herald Tribune and the Trenton Times in New Jersey.

What made Ms. feature Mrs. Graham? Among other reasons, Mrs. Graham led her newspaper in breaking the Watergate coverup — an event that led to the downfall of Richard Nixon as president of the United States.

In very tiny footnote letters, it is noted in the cover story, that Mrs. Graham put up $20,000 in seed money for the magazine. That means she helped get it off the drawing board when it was in the blueprint stage.

In keeping with her status as the current Ms. magazine cover subject, Mrs. Graham came to breakfast at Rockefeller Centre's Rainbow Room the other morning. She had to endure one of those "this is your life" presentations. It turned out to be much to her amusement, including what Gibson McCabe "told on Kay." He is the head of Newsweek magazine.

Mrs. Graham talks to interviewer

At a sales meeting once, Mrs. Graham wanted to know why Newsweek didn't have more women in that meeting. She was told by a male executive that there was enough trouble without adding more women.

The only woman there, Mrs. Graham, reached for an ashtray and sailed it across the room. She cried "sexist" and other words as the ashtray crashed.

McCabe said after the incident more women came to the sales meetings.

From the old days as a student at Vassar and the University of Chicago there were classmates to tell some things about Kay — as intimates call her.

Vivian Cadden, a senior editor at McCall's magazine, told about the Vassar days — in the thirties, two years preceding the University of Chicago days.

Mrs. Graham's father, Eugene Meyer, according to recollections at the "this is your life" skit had an idea that his daughter was just passing time at Vassar.

But the Vassar days were full of vital things. Ms. Cadden recalled:

"We put on benefits for Loyalist Spain. And we bused to Washington to ask aid for people who were out of work in that great depression.

"My most vivid recollection of Kay was associated with her peddling our newspaper. She had large stacks of them in her room."

"We lived at International House and I understand Kay came after two years at Vassar because her father thought she was piddling around at Vassar.

"She joined the American Student Union. We were activists at the University of Chicago in the thirties.

"We burned our silk stockings in protest over Japanese imperialism.

"We had a lot of friends. Some kooky, some brilliant and most of moderate means.

"She was this lady with a funny laugh to a lot of people. When it was over she went to San Francisco to a paper and I went to Newark."

Sharing the light moments in that breakfast salute to Mrs. Graham were her daughter, Mrs. Lally Weymouth, and two persons the publisher said make her "dippy."

Namely, her grandchildren, Pamela and Katharine — six and eight, respectively.

Ms. magazine describes Mrs. Graham as a multifaceted woman with many powerful friends (as well as enemies)."

Some enemies don't even know her right name. Mrs. Graham gave a for instance of that fact, recounting what some of her Newsweek colleagues heard in a New York bar the day Richard Nixon announced his decision to resign the presidency.

"And everyone knows she's had an affair with Alger Hiss."

In the cover piece, writer Howard describes Mrs. Graham as a woman who would rather dine with a brassy parvenu printer than some tiresome prime minister.

Mrs. Graham occasionally goes to impromptu Post lunches at a "local greasy spoon," and once had a group of feminists from the Post staff to supper to hear their plea that she turn down an invitation.

She turned it down.

Mrs. Graham supports some feminist causes such as able women advancing through the corporate hierarachy. She demonstrated that by hurling the ashtray at Newsweek. But she does not go for being called or addressed as Ms. Graham.

The article on Mrs. Graham is titled "Katharine Graham: The Power That Didn't Corrupt."

Her decision to publish the Watergate coverup findings of two Post reporters, Carl Bernstein and Bod Woodward, resulted in what Ms. magazine calls "the story of the century — the resignation of a president." It also led to a Pulitzer Prize, journalism's most coveted award.

A lot of publishers wouldn't have been so courageous," said Ms. magazine in describing the running of that story, first in tiny thunderclaps and later as one giant storm that electrified the nation and the world.

From the start, as Ms magazine noted, Mrs. Graham knew she was risking the wrath of the White House. Of that journalistic feat, unfolded in episodes as the bits and pieces were smoked out, Mrs. Graham said at the breakfast that she is proud of her staffers but that the role of the press (in the Watergate affair) has become far too prominent.

"Our role was important in the beginning . . . but in the long run, minor," she said.

"Judges, juries, the Congress and irate citizens — including Republicans — who just could not stomach what they saw played subsequent major roles." After Watergate, Mrs. Graham said she would like to see the press concentrate on three big problems — the economy, the food supply, and peace.

ann landers

Dear Ann Landers: I am married to a minister who is so "morally pure" that he does not need to participate in the physical side of marriage. He tells me if I disciplined my mind I would not need sex either.

I have begged him to see a doctor, but he insists I am the one who needs help. When I suggested a marriage counselor he looked me straight in the eye and said, "You forget, my dear, I am a marriage counselor." (He is.)

This man is well-liked by his congregation and is an influential leader in the community. Whenever I bring up the subject he tells me that Jesus satisfies all his needs and that I should pray for Divine Guidance.

Total abstinence might be fine for him but it is destroying me and I don't know what to do about it. Can you give me some advice?—Married In Name Only

Dear Name: Since your husband has articulated his position clearly I think you should do the same. Tell him you don't believe in celibacy in marriage and neither does Jesus. Then see a lawyer and tell it to the judge.

Dear Ann Landers: My wife and I just separated. I wonder how many other couples are like us, but haven't done anything about it. Yet.

I do a great deal of driving and have never had an accident in my life. (I'm 53.) When I drive alone I never have any trouble. When my wife is at my side she is also on my back. "You're in the wrong lane." Or "What are you waiting for? The light is green." Either I drive too fast or too slow to suit her. Another frequent suggestion: "Pass that car. He's drunk or crazy."

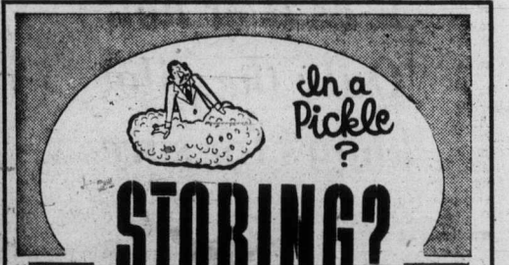

Whenever we go anywhere the little woman has to select the parking place, as if I am blind. When I pick one, she says, "It's too small. You'll never make it." Or, "There's a better one on the other side." Strange as it may seem, when it comes to sex, this same woman has no ideas, no imagination whatever.

aybe I haven't said it

Maybe I haven't said it very well, Ann, but I think the comparison explains pretty much what is wrong with plenty of marriages.—Bye-Bye Baby.

Dear Bye: You said it well enough, Bub. I wouldn't change a word. Thanks for writing.

Patricia Hearst—masses of words, few clues

In fight against inflation

West German housewives help

BERLIN (AP) — West Germany's rate of inflation is the lowest among the major industrialized nations of the West and one reason for this may lie in the way the German housewife does her shopping.

She buys her ham by the slice and her cake by the piece. She shops perhaps once a day while her North American counter-part makes a major shopping trip once a week.

"If you buy less at a time, you buy less junk," one hausfrau said in a West Berlin butcher shop. "If you buy frequently, you have better control where your money goes."

German food stores traditionally don't stay open at night. They close Saturdays at 1:30 p.m.

The hausfrau said this also helps keep food costs down.

"If you know you can't run to the store whenever you please, you learn to plan and make do with what you have at home," she said.

In a typical scene in a butcher shop in West Berlin, a man bought three slices of ham and a woman one slice. She paid the equivalent in marks of 40 cents for the slice.

Another woman bought six frankfurters for 40 cents apiece.

In a nearby baker, a piece of chocolate cake with cherries in the middle and fresh whipped cream on top sold for 84 cents and customers grumbled, saying two or three years ago the price was half that for a piece twice as large.

Even though West German's inflation so far this year stands at a moderate seven per cent, Germans are paying high prices for their food.

A survey of one supermarket showed these prices: Steak, $5 a pound; coffee, $3.30 a pound; butter, $1.80 a pound; eggs, $1.30 a dozen; bread, 63 cents a loaf.

When food prices started rising last year, the government told housewives to serve simple fare and shop around for bargains.

But consumer spokesmen countered that pennies saved in shopping around were lost in transportation costs.

Gasoline prices in West Germany are around $1.10 a gallon for regular and $1.30 for premium.

The admonition to serve simpler dishes has had a better echo. "Eintopf" is a regular feature of German menus. This "one-pot" dish is basically a vegetable stew with everything available cooked in.

The roast has returned to its traditional place as fare for a Sunday afternoon. Employers and schools report increased use of cafeterias where hot meals are served at noon, leaving the housewife free to budget the traditional weekday evening meal of bread and cold cuts or perhaps soup.

Napoleon, de Gaulle

Shaped like a pear? Then you'll succeed

LONDON (AP) — If you have a shape like a pear, don't let it bother you. You are more likely to succeed in life than most people.

At least, that is the noncaloric observation set forth in an article in The Director, journal of the British Institute of Directors.

Some of the pear-shaped people who have reached the top, says the article, are Napoleon, Gen. Charles de Gaulle, and British Prime Minister Harold Wilson as well as Wilson's predecessor, Opposition Leader Edward Heath.

The article was written by John Byrne, managing director of a glass manufacturing firm, who noted that many pear-shaped people showed the qualities of intelligence and leadership.

The successful type, says the article, has the rather narrow shoulders and elongated limbs of the lean type and the wide hips and somewhat pudgy chest and belly of the fat type.

In exaggerated form, the successful shape "is like a pear or an inverted top," says the magazine. It is also known as the "Burgundy bottle" look.

Since Patricia Hearst 'kidnapping'

Eight months have passed

By FREDERIC ORITZ
Colonist-Monitor Service

BERKELEY, Calif. — Eight months after newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst was dragged from her apartment by a little-known group calling itself the Symbionese Liberation Army:

- The FBI has interviewed more than 24,000 persons in the so-far vain effort to find Miss Hearst. Fifty agents are still working on the search in San Francisco, another 20 to 30 in Los Angeles.
- The FBI has no evidence to support recent reports that Miss Hearst has returned to Berkeley after picking up with underground groups in Guatemala.
- San Francisco police sources say they see no evidence of an SLA revival following the May 17 shootout in Los Angeles in which six SLA members were slain — but add they are still unable to predict whether a similar abduction or outburst of violence might or might not occur.
- Only a few tips come in each week to the FBI, compared with an avalanche of "sightings" from around the U.S. and Central America after the May 17 shootout.

At least eight and possibly as many as two dozen authors are planning or actually writing books on the SLA. The list includes John Lester, Hearst family spokesman during the long ordeal, and Miss Hearst's fiancee, Stephen Weed.

Colston Westbrook, a prison instructor once on the SLA "hit list," is planning a book. There are even reports Russell Little and Joseph Ramiro, both now awaiting trial on charges in the murder of Oakland school superintendent Marcus Foster, will contribute essays to a book by SLA sympathizers.

Meanwhile, the often chaotic and difficult-to-define left-wing "movement" of the San Francisco Bay area continues to debate whether the SLA members were heroes or fools — or a bit of both.

Many Bay area "movement people" are reluctant to talk with reporters about the impact of SLA on the radical scene. One who agreed to an interview was Bob Hood, a coordinator for Vietnam Veterans Against the War-Winter Soldier Organization (the VVAW-WSO). Hood is a friend and former neighbor of Ramiro.

"The whole SLA thing really hit me hard and made me think," the husky veteran recalled over a cafeteria lunch in the Oakland Job Training Centre, where he now is an audio-visual technician. "Joe and I had so much in common in our politics, our backgrounds, and our experiences that I had to wonder whether I would have gone in the same direction if I had gotten in with the same people," he said.

Hood says the SLA left mixed feelings among many in the radical scene. The shooting of the widely respected Dr. Foster drew much criticism as a foolish tactic that could set the movement back, he said. But later a tendency to romanticize the SLA members as heroes who dared to pick up arms developed, he added.

Yet aside from a few facing SLA graffiti still found on some Berkeley walls, there are few visible signs the SLA commands much attention in the movement these days.

By contrast, a band of fugitives calling themselves the Weather Underground claims credit for more than 20 bombings since 1970 and has gained new prominence. More than a few Bay area leftists predict an increase in such bombings and other sabotage. Berkeley police have taken the threat seriously enough to warn companies and individuals who may be potential targets.

First contract talks bog down

B.C. Government Employees Union has called for the appointment of a mediation officer following breakdown of negotiations for what is basically a first contract for administrative or regulatory officers.

Involved in the negotiations are administrative officers, deputy sheriffs, systems personnel, auditors, driver examiners and weighmasters.

Stumbling block in the way of signing the agreement, according to Marry Mann, chairman of the union's administrative, fiscal and regulatory component, is management's refusal to agree to retroactive pay from Oct. 1 to April 1 of this year and "management's attempt to impose an inferior cost of living adjustment as agreed to for those components that have already settled."

Mann added that while mediation is the first step which could lead to a strike, "there are no plans at this time to take a strike vote."

The majority of public service employees have already signed new agreements and should be receiving their retroactive pay within the next two weeks.

M.V. Chesnut's Garden notes

I have always been keen on begonias, for with all their exotic beauty, like some rare and difficult tropical plant, they are just about as easy to grow as a radish—easier, perhaps, for the roots don't get wormy as do the radishes.

It is such a versatile subject, too. Given a cool location with light or partial shade, tuberous begonias put on a grand show of color in beds, hanging baskets, planters, window boxes and even as indoor potted plants.

Because of this partiality, my collection of begonia bulbs has been growing over the years until it is reaching almost unmanageable proportions.

With my older and bigger bulbs I have been dividing them in the spring—cutting them up like seed potatoes, thereby getting two and occasionally three plants from one bulb.

On top of all this, I don't seem to have the will power to pass by a well-grown begonia plant in a garden shop without stopping to buy it.

So, with one thing and another, we have begonias practically coming out of our ears, and the time has come now when they should be lifted, dried off, and put into cool storage for the winter.

This is a lot of work, and sometimes I wonder if it wouldn't be smarter to settle for a flagstone patio instead of a begonia bed.

Unlike the dahlias, which I leave out until the tops are blackened by frost, I prefer to kill my begonias very gradually by drought rather than suddenly by overnight frost or by cutting down the top-growth.

In their native South American mountainside home, they are never struck down overnight by cold, but pass into dormancy slowly and gradually through lack of moisture after the tropical rainy season has passed. I try to reproduce these natural conditions as closely as possible.

I dig up my plants while they are still in full leaf, taking a good ball of soil around the roots, and I replant them quite close together—to save space—in shallow boxes, trays or old seed flats.

A few of the leaves may be trimmed away where they are causing too much overcrowding, otherwise the process is the same as an ordinary transplanting except that no water is given.

Sitting crowded together in their trays, the plants are given a precautionary spraying or dusting against pests and diseases, then the shallow boxes are broght indoors.

An airy, dry place is chosen for them—a basement floor near a window is good—and the boxes of plants are left without water until the soil dries out, the leaves fall off and the stems wither.

This takes quite a time, for begonia stems are thick and fleshy and full of sap, but it is unwise to break or cut them off until they are quite dry and dead. At this stage the withered stems will fall away from the bulb at a touch, leaving only a very small scar.

The bulbs may now be cleaned up, brushing off any soil that may be clinging to them, and placed in cool storage until it is time to start them into growth in the spring.

It is a good idea, during the cleaning, to give them another squirt of garden dust. This could be bulb dust, rose dust, potato dust, fruit tree dust or what have you.

The insecticide in the mixture will take care of any cyclamen mites or vine weevils which may have taken up residence on your bulb, while the fungicide ingredient will help protect against the various molds and rot diseases.

Failing a garden dust, coat the dormant tubers lightly with ordinary sulphur.

For storing, I use cartoons scrounged from the supermarket, burying my begonia tubers in peat moss and storing the cartoons in a very cool place, ideally between 35 and 45 degrees.

Basement storage worked out well for me until we moved to our present house; here, the temperature is a bit too high and the bulbs start sprouting too early in the spring...

I am having better luck storing in our unheated garage which is tight enough to keep out all but the very severe frosts.

"Did you see this ad?" my wife asked, handing me a folded page of the paper. It was an ad for Sotheby Parke Bernet, the international auctioneers. Discovery Days." People were invited to bring in their treasures for a free appraisal.

"How much is it worth today?" the ad said. "Let one of our experts appraise if for you free . . . Maybe it's an early American rocking chair that's been in the family for years, or a porcelain urn that your grandmother used for flower arrangements, or a piece of silver that belonged to your great aunt . . . No formality. No cost. No obligation. Just bring your heirloom in a shopping bag . . ."

"What heirlooms do we have?" I asked.

"I was thinking of that old book."

I do have an old book, a small leather-bound volume published early in the 18th century, but it had been given to me by a woman who hadn't long to live. "I couldn't sell it," I said. "So why have it appraised?"

★ ★ ★

"I think I have an idea," I said.

The clock is a golded rose porcelain with yellow and purple pansies painted on the front below the face. It stands somewhat less than a foot high, and occasionally strikes the hour and quarter hours, having an unobtrusive tick-tock and a pleasant mellow voice.

My wife has never known whether her mother brought it with her when she came from France, a mere girl travelling steerage, or whether it was acquired later, perhaps as a wedding gift.

I took it down from the curio cabinet and put it in a cardboard carton and we drove out to Sotheby Parke Bernet. The parking lot was already crowded. People were heading for the entrance with shopping bags, cartons and unwrapped treasures. Just inside the doorway we bumped into a friend who was leaving with something in a large plastic bag.

"Trade you," she said, evidently having got a disappointing appraisal. She peeked into my carton.

"It's my wife's mother's clock," I explained. "If I trade, what have you got?"

"It's a cake stand," she said, opening the bag to reveal what appeared to be a silver stand with three tiers. "It's only worth about $200," she said. "I had visions of a trip to Europe and all that. I think I'll just give it to Christina as a wedding present."

A receptionist looked at our clock and said we should stand in the "Decorations" line. Decorations, it turned out, covered a great variety of objects. There were perhaps 30 people in the line, and it was moving so slowly most of them were sitting on folded chairs.

"Would you hold the clock?" I asked my wife. "I want to look around."

I walked up to the front of the silver line where a bearded young man in a beige suit was rendering casual judgments on the articles placed on the table in front of him.

"That's Japanese," he said of a candelabra that looked to me as if it might have been made for one of the Bourbon kings. "Silver plate."

"Japanese!" the woman exclaimed. "Plate!" The young man in the beige looked on to the next person is the line.

Out in the lobby, articles that would be for sale in upcoming auctions were on display behind glas . . . A note in Louis Pasteur's hand . . . A sterling silver cocktail shaker engraved with Mabel Normand's name . . . A Charles II silver tankard . . . A pair of George III candlesticks . . . a T'and dynasty figurine . . .

I went back to the end of the Decorations line. It hadn't moved much, but was longer. The woman behind us had a bedspread in a brown sack. It was either 1775 or 1776, she said, but the moths had got one edge.

"I think we'd better give up," I told my wife.

★ ★ ★

We took the clock home and put it back on the shelf. The trip hadn't been a total loss. At least we didn't find out that the clock was Japanese. And we did learn that it doesn't travel well. It's lost its tick-tock and it doesn't chime anymore.

Sydney Harris

After a discreet silence of more than 60 years, the Guide Michelin, the famous French handbook of eating places in Europe, has come out with its gastronomical reassessment of hotels and restaurants in England. And the verdict — unchanged in six decades — is: bloody awful.

Not a single eating place in Shakespeare's sceptered isle received as much as a two-star rating indicating that it's worth making a detour for. And only two dozen among the more than 3,000 won a single star, which is as lowly decorated as you can get.

Although born in London, and remaining something of an Anglophile, I am sadly forced to agree with this stern Gallic judgment. The British remain the most civilized people in the world — except in the matter of food, where their taste and criteria hover slightly below that of your average Australian bushman family.

London has indeed become the swingingest town in Europe in the last decade, and does now for the first time contain a dozen or so excellent restaurants — but none of them is English. There are some good French restaurants, fine Italian ones, and splendid East Indian eating places; but the indigenous Savoy and Ritz (and even my own personal favorite, the Connaught) make Wimpy's taste like Escoffier.

My wife went to London for a week recently, and even armed with the few names I gave her (such as Mario's, the Caprice, and Mirabelle), she had a difficult time finding a meal that was both savory and digestible. Her favorite after-dinner drink there turned out to be Pepto-Bismol.

Nobody knows why this is so. A few British items are superb, but they are usually to be found in little pubs tucked away in an obscure corner of Yorkshire. High tea is generally excellent; in fact, it's better than anything labelled a "meal" in Britain. If you can live on scones and tiny cucumber sandwiches, you can just make it gastronomically there.

"Ethnic" food is the big rage in London, and it is easy to see (and taste) why. But Englishness is a kind of ethnicity, too, and why haven't the British developed a native cuisine such as the French, the Italians, or the Hungarians?

Maybe their famous sexual repression has carried over into the area of food, and they feel it would be immoral to prepare dishes that are sensually evocative. It's hard to slurp bouillabaisse with a stiff upper lip.

Somehow, they can't even imitate other nations' favorites. Have you ever tried munching what passes for a "cheeseburger" there, or gulping down that pulverized chalk they call a "milk shake"? Actually, if you don't dote on fish and chips, there's nothing in the way of a "snack" to be had there. The best you can find between meals is Tums.

James Bacon's Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD — Ron Lerner, once a top movie executive but now a monetary analyst, predicts that the current inflaton will inevitably lead to a depression — and that the movie business may be one of the worst hit.

Every now and then I like to vary the normally cheerful content of this column but Ron is not to be taken lightly.

As many stock market pros know, monetary analysis is the latest indicator being used on the market.

More impressive is the fact that Ron's old pals in the movie business called him first about the Homestake Oil deal and he touted all off. Andy Williams, who lost $500,000 and a host of others all wish they had known Ron.

Ron started off as a choreographer, then became a casting executive. He worked mostly with 20th Century-Fox but before that was with Kirk Douglas Bryna Co., and also Four Star.

"I just found that the flow of funds through the economy was both fascinating and challenging, not that being a studio executive wasn't," says Ron.

It became more than a hobby with him. He studied the market from every aspect and then he started to put his theories to work. They worked.

Needless to say, he's a millionaire.

But getting back to the depression prediction again. He's the second economist in recent months I have heard make that prediction. The other was a Canadian economist with whom I appeared on a talk show.

Nothing stops inflation like a depression.

Fortunately, in my case, I grew up during the Great Depression and am still waiting for prosperity.

Some weeks ago, Jan Murray told me he'd be doing a baseball story on The Night Stalker. Seemed funny at the time.

Turns out when they sent Jan the script, he read the title without his glasses. He thought it was called The Umpire. With glasses on, he found out later that it's called The Vampire and Jan plays a procurer in it.

It happened in the most simple way. Carmi Shapiro, the publicist on the movie, called up Princess Margaret's husband and asked if he would like to shoot George as a Luftwaffe colonel of intelligence. "I'd love to," said Snowdon.

Tomorrow morning in every publicity office in town, the bosses will be giving their press agents hell and asking: "Why didn't you think of that?"

At a party for Nikki, Angie livened things up by playing a game about school. She asked if anyone knew what a person in charge of a library was called.

"A bookie," spoke up Nikki.

9 IN MEMORIAM

GREXTON—In cherished and loving memory of our mother, Mrs. Lily Grexton, who passed away Oct. 1st, 1958.
She troubled no one, her wants were few
And now dear Lord, she has come to you
Take care of her, as she takes her rest
For the one you have taken was the very best.
A cheery smile, a heart of gold
She suffered much, but never told
Till God above knew what was best
—Lovingly remembered always — The Family.

TIPPETT—In memory of George Tippett, loving Husband, Father and Grandfather who passed away one year ago today, October 1, 1973. Fondly remembered and sadly missed wife Violet and family.

This letter, quoted in full, was received last week by me:

"Dear Sir, I was under the impression you were supposed to be a critic of the TV shows but it seems to me you use your job to vent your spleen on personalities, Doris Day for one. You have become extremely boring about this actress and it's time you shut up about her.

"Your feelings of happiness or otherwise are of no interest to your readers, whichever performer you are fanatical about in your dislike. I hold no brief for Doris Day or any other for that matter, but you are going beyond the limit of good taste.

"Yours, A critic of you and your column. PS: Anything you recommend I usually avoid as some of your recommendations have been flops."

I rarely print letters whose authors don't sign their names but it does seem a pity that after all these years, some readers don't realize this column is in fun and for fun. As for the PS, the writer has missed a lot of good shows and that's a pity, too.

Fifth triumph

ASOH MACHI, Japan (AP) — Masashi Ozaki won the $100,000 Japan open championship Sunday by firing a par 73 for a 72-hole total of 279, 13-under-par. It was Ozaki's fifth victory of the season.

Final edition of this year's King Fisherman Contest starts today and anglers will be fishing for a fresh round of King Fisherman tankards, Prince buttons, Prince crests and monthly hidden weight prizes.

The September contest has now ended and weigh-in stations and anglers are reminded that entries for all fish caught in September should be in the mail today so they are not left out of any awards or hidden weight draws.

All fish caught today and until the contest ends on Oct. 27 will be eligible for other awards and a new hidden weight draw.

Then comes the big draw when every fish entered in the five-month-long contest will be placed in the grand hidden weight barrel for an expenses-paid trip for two to Australia or Fiji, plus other prizes.

Computer aid talks to blind

WATERTOWN, Mass. (AP) — A computer is giving blind people back talk — to help them avoid mistakes. The device, linked to a telephone line, helps sightless persons "look up" the spelling of technical words, prepare payrolls, check inventories, proofread printed copy and process invoices. It was developed by a team of researchers at MIT's Research Laboratory of Electronics headed by Dr. Kenneth Ingham, blind for 17 years.

HOPE (CP) — A partial skeleton was recovered from the Fraser River about two miles west of here by a group of boys fishing in the river.

UVic, Manpower launch program

Focus on jobs for grads

The University of Victoria's Canada Manpower office has begun a major effort to increase employment opportunities for graduating students.

With the UVic administration, Manpower is developing a comprehensive careers orientation program along with a national promotion scheme to boost on-campus employee recruitment.

Frank Schroeder, officer-in-charge of the campus Manpower office, said the recruitment promotion has already begun with the mailing of 450 information kits to major employers across the country.

"Many employers haven't been aware of the status of UVic," Schroeder said. "They thought of it as a junior college."

Response to the mailing campaign has so far been "very positive," Schroeder added. Several big businesses, including General Motors, will begin recruiting employees at UVic for the first time next year.

He noted that in recent years employers have shown much more interest in hiring students specializing in technological fields such as engineering and applied sciences.

"But we're finding some major employers are now saying they're interested in getting the good student with a BA. They apparently see a need for more generalists to work along with the specialists, and arts and science courses are becoming more acceptable."

The Manpower office will also join UVic administrator, faculty and counsellors on a careers committee to advise graduating students on career interests and job possibilities.

The careers orientation program will be developed to assist and advise students throughout their years at university.

These innovations, Schroeder said, should have a major impact in developing communication among students, faculty, administration, Manpower and the business community.

Schroeder added that his office is interested in increasing immediate employment opportunities for UVic's part-time students.

An advertising campaign will soon be urging Victoria employers to hire these students, he said.

Some party, some hosts

NEW YORK (UPI) — Undercover detectives who have been buying stolen merchandise for six months invited their suppliers to a weekend party and arrested them when they arrived.

Forty-two suspects were seized by detectives after officers posing as taxi drivers drove the guests to the party in a warehouse. Other police wore velvet tuxedoes as part of their fancy-dress disguise for the affair.

A police spokesman said he expected up to 180 persons eventually would be arrested and stolen property would be returned to 1,400 people.

Most of those arrested were charged with possession of stolen merchandise. By Sunday, 50 persons were in custody.

The operation started slowly but "then it just mushroomed," said Richard Ledda, a bearded agent who posed as the chief buyer. "Sometimes I was really convinced myself I was a fence."

Police decided to end the investigation with mass arrests, getting the suspects in one location to avoid possible violence. The invitations to what was to be a surprise party for the guests went out by letter, telephone and word of mouth.

200 Indians storm Parliament

Fierce battle disrupts ceremony

Honor guard fixes bayonets, blocks Hill

Both attempts failed but each time the Mounties and the Indians exchanged punches. There were numerous tussles on the ground; sticks, bricks and placards flew through the air.

Ottawa city police said Monday night that seven demonstrators had been charged with obstructing and assaulting police. Eighteen people originally detained had been released but "possibly more charges will be laid," a police spokesman said. He said three RCMP officers and possibly one demonstrator were injured.

Between the two clashes the Indians burned a Maple Leaf

By STEPHEN SCOTT

OTTAWA (CP) — The government will make a downpayment this session of Parliament on some of the promises it made during the July federal election campaign.

Indications are that the part of the promises that voters will see this session will be those that cost the least.

The throne speech read at the opening of Parliament Monday said that as far as new initiatives are concerned the government "will be conscious of the need for restraint and careful phasing in relation to the state of the economy."

In other words, don't look for government money pouring into a "superbus" for inter-city transportation or for that exclusive, tourist-oriented train that would chug across the country in daylight hours only.

Both came up in the election campaign with promises of subsidies and other forms of help in housing, only some of which will see the light of day in the relatively near future.

During the election campaign the Liberals made major promises in the area of housing, transport, old-age pensions, consumer protection

By JIM HUME
Colonist Reporter

The budget for the first year of operation of the newly created B.C. Assessment Authority has been set at $6.6 million, roughly $2.6 million higher than originally anticipated.

When legislation creating the authority was approved, an outright grant of $1.5 million each year for five years, and a grant equivalent to one tenth of a mill of the total value of all taxable assessed property in the province (approximately $2.5 million), was regarded as adequate financing.

An order-in-council issued Monday lists $5.7 million as the budget for assessment and clerical staffs, $875,000 for other office staff and $32,000 for accommodation and furnishings.

But whatever the budget it won't eliminate the headaches now facing the new organization.

Those problems begin officially today as Assessment Commissioner Percy Wright awaits replies to invitations to all municipal assessors throughout the province to join his staff.

Wright said he was hopeful that most municipal assessors would reply quickly and in the affirmative, but added that there would be problems in many smaller municipalities where assessors do double-duty in the municipal structure.

Joe Antalek, clerk-assessor of Pitt Meadows (pop. 4,000) near Haney, is typical of the small-town administrator now facing a crossroads in his career. Should he become one of 700 staff members working for the assessment authority? Or should he quietly decline Wright's invitation and remain with Pitt Meadows as clerk?

"I just don't know what I'm going to do," Antalek said in a telephone interview Monday, "and I don't suppose I'm alone. It's really the same old story of a government introducing legislation before studying the ramifications."

Legislation too soon

In the past, Antalek, like other small community clerk assessors, has brought his assessment roll as up to date as possible by "working till midnight every day in late November or early December."

This year he has called bids from firms of private appraisers and now has a low bid to send to the assessment authority, hopefully for approval.

"But even that creates problems for us," he said. "Like who will defend us at the court of revision? If there are only a few appeals, I guess I could maybe handle it. But if there are 200 or so, and there could be with assessments going to 100 per cent of true market value, I just don't know what we'll do."

Wright agrees that Antalek is not alone.

"I'm afraid the same situation will exist in most small communities like Pitt Meadows, Comox, Enderby, Armstrong, Greenwood and Fernie," Wright said. "There are many others, but these are all small communities where the assessor plays a double and sometimes triple role."

But while the smaller municipalities are going to be hit hardest as they have to find either a new assessor or a new municipal clerk before year-end, cities like Victoria have to gear for some juggling, too.

City assessor Jack Ozard noted that of the 11 members in the city's assessment department, eight were fairly solidly committed to joining the provincial authority.

"There will be some problems," Ozard said. "We have positions in city hall designated assessor-collector, that's were a man is both in charge of assessment rolls and in charge of collection rolls. Obviously, if he joins the assessmet authority, the city will need someone to assume the collection duties."

Conversely, if the city employee decides to stay with the city as a collector, the assessment authority will have to find another assessor to make up the complement of trained appraisers required to handle the assessment load.

City Manager James Bramley said he didn't anticipate any major problems in the switch-over, officially scheduled for today but now anticipated by month-end.

Flight record pigeonholed

Cyprus backlash

Senators vote no Turkey aid

The Senate voted Monday to cut off military aid to Turkey, but killed an attempt to ban all U.S. aid to the world's exporting countries.

The Senate approved an amendment by Sen. Thomas Eagleton, Missouri Democrat, that would prohibit aid to any country using U.S. weapons in violation of laws governing their use. The Senate was reacting to Turkey's invasion of Cyprus.

Earlier the Senate, by 46 to 33, killed an amendment by Sen. Frank Church, Idaho Democrat, to deny any aid to the oil-exporting countries in retaliation for huge oil price increases set by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

The Eagleton amendment to the pending continuing resolution on foreign aid won overwhelming approval despite arguments by Democratic leader Mike Mansfield that the Senate should not interfere with Cyprus negotiations being undertaken by Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

"The secretary has been warned," Eagleton said, "that the letter and the spirit of American law require an immediate cutoff of military assistance to Turkey, which more than two months ago violated its bilateral arms agreement with the United States by using American weapons to intervene in Cyprus."

Grain firms reject Munro

VANCOUVER (CP)—A legislated settlement of the Vancouver grain handlers strike appeared certain today after elevator companies rejected Monday the latest settlement proposal by Labor Minister John Munro.

The government said in its throne speech that legislation would be passed to ensure movement of grain if the parties did not resolve the dispute.

Munro sent telegrams to the five elevator companies and the 550-member local 333 of the grain workers union outlining two proposals that might end the dispute which has lingered since Aug. 26.

Union business agent Henry Kancs said the union accepted the proposals but R. W. Mead, chief negotiator for the companies, rejected them.

Mead said the proposal is the same as the companies rejected two weeks ago and an end to the strike "will have to be legislated."

Munro said only two items in the conciliation report by Dr. Neil Perry of Victoria remain in dispute—a cost-of-living allowance and pension proposals.

Munro suggested the pension issue might be resolved on the basis of company contributions of 25 cents per man-hour worked plus $20,000 to be made by the firms into a pension fund annually in 1974 to 1978 inclusive.

The cost-of-living allowances should be based on the Perry report with an understanding between the parties that overlapping of adjustments would be avoided, the minister said.

Mead said the companies accepted the pension proposals but don't want the cost-of-living clause to go into effect until next year.

Slight signs of cancer

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Betty Ford's doctors reported Monday they found slight traces of cancer cells in the president's wife's lymph tissue, but said there was no clinical evidence the disease had spread further.

The surgeons said they remain optimistic for Mrs. Ford's "prolonged survival."

Throne speech lacks surprises

Government spending will keep low profile

OTTAWA (CP) — With well-rehearsed ceremonial rituals Parliament opened Monday and heard that the government plans to restrain its spending in the battle against inflation.

The throne speech opening the new Parliament acknowledged inflation to be a "serious and urgent" problem.

Long after Prime Minister Trudeau had said inflation had been licked, the speech made it clear that the main battle lies ahead.

"For its part, the government will exercise restraint in its own expenditures with particular emphasis on improving effectiveness and efficiency in its existing operation . . ."

But "the government does not intend deliberately to generate slack in the economy in order to combat inflation."

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield said "there was really nothing surprising in the speech from the throne" except that inflation now seems to be recognized as a major problem by the Liberal government.

Detailed stories Pages 2, 10

Ed Broadbent, New Democratic Party parliamentary leader, said there are indications the government may follow a deflationary policy, despite its explicit promise not to generate slack in the economy.

Social Credit Leader Real Caouette said he has heard 16 throne speeches and Monday's seemed "an exact copy" of the first one.

The speech, read by Chief Justice Bora Laskin, indicated a heavy schedule of federal-provincial meetings, and consultations with labor, management, the professions, farmers and other segments of society as the government launches a co-operative attack on inflation.

"The government does intend to ask all Canadians to join with it in a co-operative effort to achieve by non-inflationary means an equitable sharing among all groups in the community of the fruits of our productive efforts.

"Canada has thus far suffered less from inflation than most other countries, but the problem is serious and urgent."

Bylaw provides target, birds don't

Jeremy Tatum thinks Saanich police will have problems in applying a new bylaw that allows them to shoot Japanese starlings and magpies.

Main problem, he says, is that there aren't any on Vancouver Island.

Tatum, a professional astronomer who is past president of Victoria Natural History Society, takes exception to police killing any birds, even ones that don't exist here.

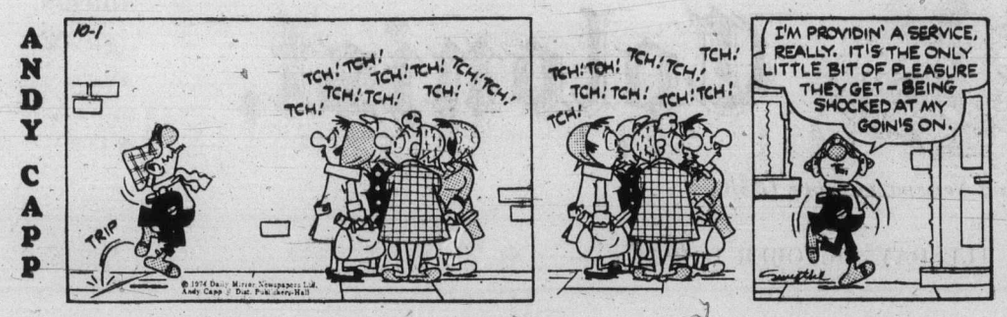

"If some are in competition with man, attacking agriculture or presenting a danger to aircraft, that's another story," he says.

But he's concerned about Saanich aldermen "passing legislation on things they know nothing whatever about."

Tatum says their ignorance is obvious because the new bylaw allows police or property owners with official permission — to shoot Japanese starlings and magpies, along with English sparrows, crows and English starlings.

What made them decide that? he wants to know. Did they study the bird population?

Tatum says he doubts the worth of the bylaw, since there is in fact no such thing as a Japanese starling, although sometimes the name is given to the crested mynah, which has never been spotted in this area. And he says there are no records of magpies on Vancouver Island, either.

OTTAWA (CP)—Health Minister Marc Lalonde says he plans to introduce legislation within the next month to change the country's cannabis laws.

Cannabis (marijuana and hashish) will be switched from the Narcotics Control Act to the Federal Food and Drugs Act, Lalonde said Monday in an interview following the throne speech.

The drugs act now covers prescription drugs as well as controlled and restricted drugs like amphetamines and the LSD hallucinogens.

Lalonde said the legislation would set out in detail how cannabis would be controlled and what exact penalties would be imposed.

It is expected the proposed changes will mean cannabis possession will no longer be punishable by jail sentences although the offence will be subject to fines.

Penalties for trafficking, importing and cultivation are expected to remain stiff.

The legislative changes will do little, however, to alter the current practice in most courtrooms. Although first offenders in cannabis possession cases can be sent to jail, the courts usually impose only fines.

The proposed cannabis changes were announced more than two years ago by then Health Minister John Munro following publication of one of the Le Dain Royal Commission reports calling for more liberal cannabis laws.

Since he became health minister almost two years ago, Lalonde has said several times that the cannabis legislation was imminent. This time he gave a "personal commitment" that the legislation would be introduced in the Commons during October.

The throne speech, which didn't mention the cannabis legislation, promised government action generally in the health field. It said emphasis would be placed "on the prevention of illness, which includes raising the level of physical fitness of Canadians."

Lalonde also said the 65-year-old Proprietary or Patent Medicine Act will soon be placed under the Food and Drugs Act.

He gave no details, but the secrecy provision in the patent medicine act allowing manufacturers to market non-prescription drugs without telling the buyer what's in them has been under review in the health department.

Ottawa will promote search for new oil

The government outlined a mixture of old and new proposals in the throne speech it hopes will increase the search for new petroleum supplies.

Bills setting up a national petroleum corporation and giving the government authority to collect an export tax on crude oil will be reintroduced, the speech said. Both measures died when Parliament was dissolved for the July 8 election.

But the government also promised steps to ensure that oil and gas prices are regulated "in a manner which will encourage necessary exploration and development in Canada."

Energy Minister Donald Macdonald said outside the house that the first steps came last week when he announced a 67 per cent increase in the price of gas exported to the United States.

Increases in domestic prices also are expected, but the amount has not yet been announced, the minister said. Discussions with the producing provinces were continuing.

Macdonald said the government still plans to bring the price of gas in stages up to the level of an equivalent amount of oil.

It hoped the higher gas prices would lead to greater exploration efforts by the petroleum countries.

But the government's plans drew some sharp criticism from opposition parties.

Action on jobless in 'near future'

OTTAWA (CP) — Amendments to the Unemployment Insurance Act promised in the throne speech Monday will be introduced in the House of Commons "fairly shortly," a spokesman for the Unemployment Insurance Commission said.

The proposals had been promised in the throne speech delivered last winter, but the July 8 federal election prevented their introduction into Parliament.

The UIC spokesman said Monday the changes will "encourage rapid re-entry of the unemployed into the labor force and make the program more flexible and responsive to regional differences."

Last spring, during the election campaign Manpower Minister Robert Andras said the proposed amendments would discourage persons from quitting jobs casually or refusing "suitable" work by increasing the disqualification period in such cases to eight weeks from five.

Shady selling spiels will draw federal fire

OTTAWA (CP) — The government promised Monday to provide consumers with limited protection against shady selling techniques, misleading loan interest rates and potentially-dangerous electrical products.

But it fell short of July 8 election pledges to shield average Canadians from what Prime Minister Trudeau called the jungle of lending and credit provisions that now favor the fortunate.

The government also gave notice that it plans to keep the food prices review board in action for another year, ending speculation that the 1½-year-old board would be abandoned when its mandate expired in December, this year.

Your good health

By George C. Thosteson, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Can bedsores be cured? Is it best to keep them moist or dry? My mother has had one for several months. It is located at the end of her spine. — Mrs. W.W.

Bedsores are the result of continuous pressure. They result, not only from lying in one position for too long, but also from moisture, also from poor nutrition and poor circulation which occur naturally in the bedridden patient.

The scores can be prevented by the simple expedient of moving the patient onto his side from time to time and by keeping the weight-bearing areas, such as the spine, clean and dry. Leakage of urine and stool should be avoided.

If a red spot begins to show, infrared light treatment can help prevent its spreading. That is, infrared for short periods — not ultra-violet. Heat from a gooseneck lamp placed about two feet above the skin helps also.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I read about the lady who washes her hands with soap and water after doing the dishes, to prevent getting a detergent rash. Yes, I have been doing this for some time now and it works for me. My hands had never given me any trouble until the last few years. When it did start, I tried washing my hands after doing the dishes and it does work. — Mrs. V.J.

And I've heard from some others who said it didn't work for them, and they have to wear gloves. Best I can say is, try it. If it works for you, that's fine.

Opposition rams throne speech

Housing glue too thin

OTTAWA (CP) — A government housing package designed to ease the housing crisis was unwrapped in the throne speech Monday, disclosing items from the defeated May budget and the Liberal election platform.

Opposition spokesmen said the government housing plan will do nothing to relieve the housing shortage.

Ed Broadbent, parliamentary leader of the New Democratic Party, and Sinclair Stevens (PC—York-Simcoe) said the government should have stepped in with a massive program to increase housing supply.

The throne speech refers to additional assistance for buyers of moderately-priced housng and government sources said this includes the $500 home purchase grant for first-time home buyers. It also included government insurance of conventional lenders under the Assisted Home-Ownership Program.

Broadbent said the government promise to continue asking mortgage lenders to provide low down payments for moderately-priced housing is a "very clear indication of the weakness of the whole mortgage policy." Without teeth, this would not enable the government proposal to increase the supply of land for housing is a motherhood statement. The government should say specifically that it will launch a massive program of providing serviced land for housing, he said.

Nothing short of a giant program bringing thousands of acres of land into the housing market would suffice, he said.

The government will continue pressing financial institutions to direct all low down payment loans to moderately-priced housing, the throne speech said.

It also will bring back the registered home owner's savings plan which died with the Commons defeat of the Liberal government's budget last May. The plan, as outlined in the May budget, would allow a tax deduction of savings up to $1,000 a year for every person planning to buy a home.

Spouses will receive old-age pensions early

OTTAWA (CP) — The government intends to pay old-age pensions to spouses, aged 60 to 65, of persons who are already receiving the pensions, the throne speech said Monday.

The extension of the pensions was promised by the Liberals during the July 8 federal election campaign and is one of several social security reforms listed in the speech.

The promised pension payments will begin in October, 1975, the speech said.

At present, the old-age pensions, paid to all persons 65 or over who meet residence requirements, are $117.02 a month. Guaranteed income supplements can add as much as another $82.08 for single persons or married persons whose spouses are not pensioners.

The throne speech also promised steps would be taken to "eliminate certain hardships" for Canadians away from the country for limited periods.

Under the existing law, Canadians who have not lived in the country for 25 years beyond their twenty-first birthday, may have their pensions cut off it they leave Canada for longer than six months.

Increases in war veterans allowances were also promised.

The throne speech also outlined proposals that have already been agreed to in the social security review that is now underway between the federal and provincial governments.

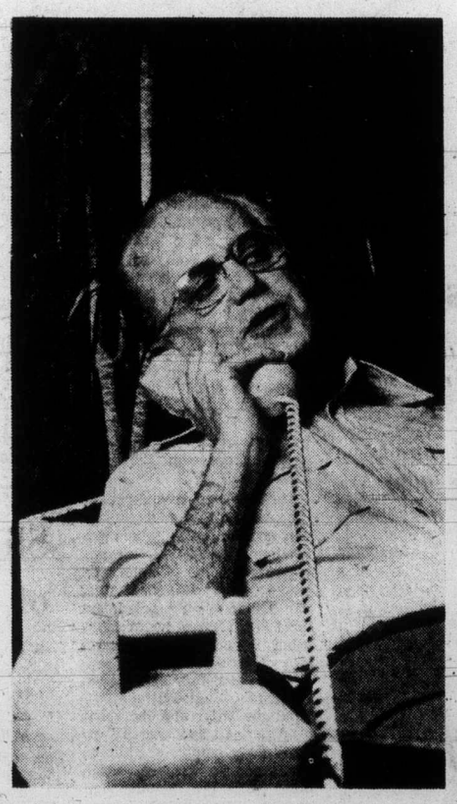

Canada Pension Plan amendments to change the income base upon which contributions are made will be introduced, the throne speech said.

Meet Miss moneybags, the artful dodger

CHICAGO (UPI) — For Linda Taylor, welfare cheques are a way of life. They help her pay bills on her 1974 Cadillac, Lincoln and Chevy station wagon, the four buildings she claims to own on the South Side, and anything else her lifestyle has helped her to own.

Two police burglary unit detectives, Jack Sherwin and Jerry Kush, stumbled onto Miss Tayloy and her extraordinary network of names, addresses, phone numbers and husbands when she came into the station Aug. 8 to report a $14,000 apartment that that police believe never happened.

A fingerprinting revealed that Miss Taylor, 47, had tried a similar theft report in 1972 and that she was wanted in Michigan for welfare fraud. Because of that warrant, extradition proceedings are underway.

"She is a small person with nondescript features," Kush said. "Her skin is shallow — like a medium yellow — and she has no features that make her peculiar to any racial background. So she passes as a Filipino. She puts on a black wig and becomes a Negro and with other makeup and wigs, she passes for white."

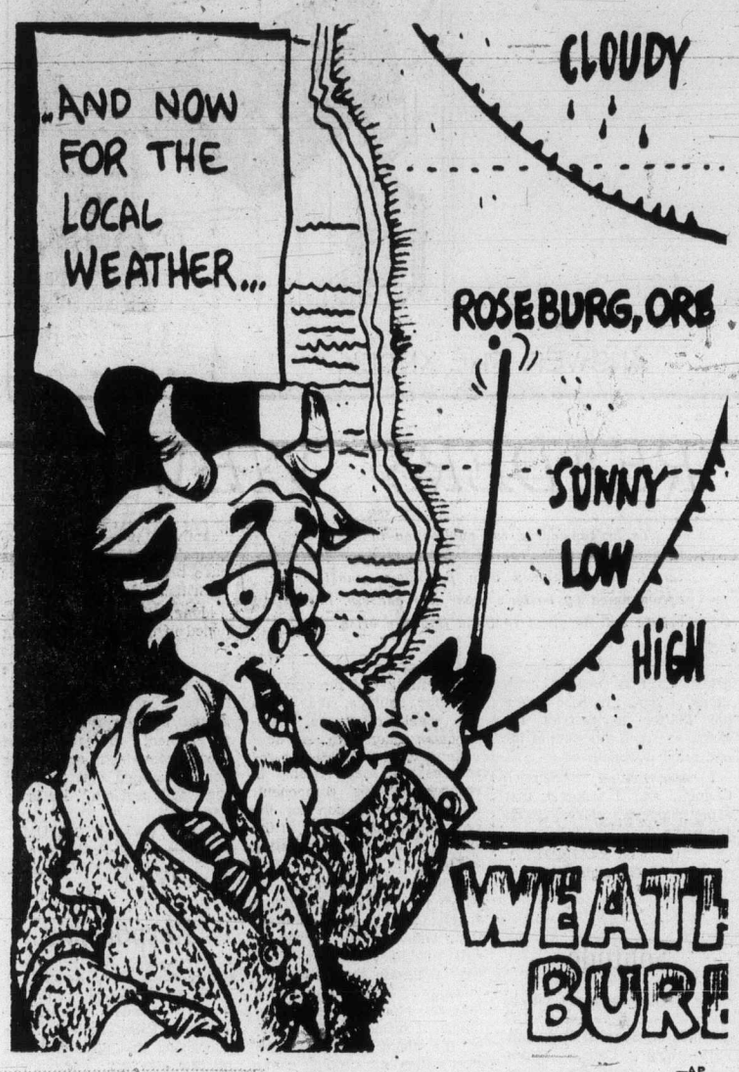

Kush said during their month-long investigation, they discovered Miss Taylor receives welfare cheque and food stamps at two different addresses and under two different names, that she has at least 27 aliases, uses 31 addresses, has 25 different phone numbers, has three social security cards, and owns stocks and bonds under a variety of names.

She claims to have had several husbands — all now dead, and was married last month to a sailor at Great Lakes Naval Training Centre who is 26 years her junior.

"She poses as a doctor or a registered nurse or as a business agent representing various firms," Kush said. "Our records trace her back to 1967 but she was first arrested when she was 19 or 20 for theft in Seattle."

Sherwin and Kush's investigations have spurred a probe of welfare abuse by the state legislative advisory commission on public aid, a powerful state committee.

In addition to Miss Taylor's own abuses, evidence indicates she may have been part of a well-organized scheme involving welfare cheaters and state public aid employes bilking the welfare system.

Leftist leaders oust de Spinola as crowd chants death to CIA

LISBON (AP) — Young leftist military leaders forced Gen. Antonio de Spinola to quit as Portugal's president Monday and three left-leaning military officers began running the country.

In his last television address as president, Spinola warned that, with the government's sharp swing to the left, Portugal was sliding into "chaos and anarchy" and that "new forms of slavery are being prepared."

The Communists and Socialists organized mass demonstrations Monday night in downtown Lisbon as about 20,000 people chanted "death to the CIA," "long live the new president" and "long live the provisional government."

An announcement by the Junta of National Salvation, which had engineered the coup last April that brought Spinola to power, said Army Gen. Francisco da Costa Gomez will assume the presidency and rule with two navy captains, who are staunch leftists.

Despite the internal changes, Portugal is not expected to alter its foreign policy significantly.

U.S. going to pot: senator

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Chairman James Eastland of the U.S. Senate internal security subcommittee said Monday if the current rate of marijuana use continues, Americans may find themselves "saddled with a large population of semi-zombies."

Eastland said information supplied to his panel suggests the validity of estimates that 35 million Americans have used marijuana at some time, with more than 10 million regular users.

"If the cannabis epidemic continues to spread at the rate of the post-Berkeley period (since 1965), we may find ourselves saddled with a large population of semi-zombies, of young people acutely afflicted by the amotivational syndrome," he said.

Arabs threaten cut in oil supply again

United Press International

The Arab states will shut off oil supplies again to western states supporting Israel if current diplomatic efforts do not produce a just settlemest of the Middle East conflict, the Arab oil workers federation said Monday in Cairo.

Taking a different tack, Algeria's government-controlled El Moudjahid newspaper in Algiers said the United States might follow up its demand for a rollback of oil prices by invading oil-producing countries.

Elsewhere:

- In Wellington, New Zealand, the Shah of Iran warned industrialized nations they would come off second best in a showdown with world oil producers. He urged the United States to start exploiting more of its own energy resources that he said were idle.
- Venezuela will probably decree a "moderate increase" today in taxes paid by American and other foreign oil companies operating there, authoritative official sources said Monday. It should give Venezuela additional oil revenue of about $230 million.
- The Kuwaiti government said it was in favor of a compromise solution to the world oil problem that would satisfy both oil-producing and oil-consuming states and establish links between the prices of foodstuffs and petroleum.
- President Ford's economic advisers are discussing proposals to tax gasoline 10 cents a gallon and to place a heavy tax on the excessive use of other fuels such as natural gas and oil.
- President Ford said inflation has gone far beyond levels that the world can tolerate, and pledged the United States to help solve the problem through co-operation in trade, monetary policy and other means.
- Shoppers in the U.S. can expect to see food prices rise another 8 to 10 per cent by the end of next year. Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz said that increase would come on top of the 12 per cent food price hike already registered this year.
- In Tokyo, sharp hikes in the price of many daily necessities and essential public services go into effect today, possibly triggering another inflationary spiral in Japan's already-inflated economy.

WORLD in BRIEF

FBI holds man after Winnipeg mail bomb blast

VANCOUVER (CP) — FBI investigators in Portland, Ore., are holding a suspect in last week's mail bombing in Winnipeg which blew off the hand of a court official.

An FBI spokesman said in a telephone interview Monday from Portland a 50-year-old man was turned over to American immigration authorities after he was picked up Sunday.

Albert Conversano, a U.S. immigration officer, said the suspect could be prosecuted for entering the U.S. illegally, he could be deported or could return to Canada voluntarily.

South Africa on griddle

UNITED NATIONS (CP)) — Canada, while condemning South Africa's racial policies, vigorously opposed in the General Assembly on Monday a move by a group of African states to oust the big white-ruled republic from the United Nations. Canadian Ambassador Saul Rae said any step to isolate South Africa would only "reduce our chances of success in modifying" its policies.

Acupuncture misses point

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Acupuncture treatment for deafness brought no significant gains in hearing for 41 patients, according to a new study announced Monday. In one of the first extensive studies in the U.S. of patients treated at acupuncture clinics, two audiology experts at Temple University said their study offers little hope from the ancient Chinese medical art of treatment with needles.

The next time you turn on your colour TV, go up to the screen with the magnifying glass, and take a close look at what's really making up that colour picture you're looking at. Dots. Red, blue and green dots. If the dots are kind of blurry, they're coming at you through a white matrix.

And we can tell you right now that your set is at least 5 years old. Because the black matrix improvement has been around about that long. Colours against a black background will always stand out much better than colours against a white background.

So maybe it's time for a new colour TV.

When the salesman turns a set on, go through the same procedure.

Examine the screen up close with the glass. The dots look much clearer now, because they're coming through a black matrix. Now stand back and look at the picture. You may be so impressed with the brilliance (as compared with what you've been seeing at home), that you'll start getting out your chequebook right then and there.

And don't forget the magnifying glass. Go right up to the screen with the glass, as soon as the salesman turns on the 14" screen C-335. While he's talking about 100% solid state dependability, plug-in modules for easy servicing, Automatic Fine Tuning and Automatic Balance Control, you study what's happened inside the colour. Black background for definition, you've seen that already. But, the dots aren't dots any longer. They're stripes of colour. And it doesn't take a lot of thought to realize there's more colour area in a stripe than in a dot.

Now stand back and look. That's called Toshiba Blackstripe™ colour television. It's $500 worth of colour if ever you saw it. And for only $479.95 (suggested retail).

Team Canada Welcome warm but exasperating

MOSCOW (CP) — Maple leafs sprouted on Red Square near Lenin's tomb Monday, and the effect for Team Canada 74 was almost enough to overcome a confusing hassle on arrival at Moscow's major airport.

For almost three hours, players and their wives were hung up, first to get off their Air Canada charter flight from Helsinki, second to get into the reception area, third to locate their baggage and fourth to put it on a bus for a ride of about 24 miles to the Rossiya Hotel in downtown Moscow.

At one point, Team Canada's manager, Bill Hunter of Edmonton, unleashed his famous temper. He told officials at the airport such confusion for a visiting team would not have been tolerated in Canada.

The Canadian team, close to normal after two exhibition games in three days during a respite from their eight-game international series, meets the Soviet Union here today at 9:30 a.m. Victoria time in the fifth game.

Downtown, close to the three hotels in which Canadian fans are quartered, the red maple leaf—emblematic of the Canadian flag — was easy to spot.

Occasionally, cries of "Da, Da Canada, nyet, nyet Soviet," were heard. Passing Soviet citizens treated the Canadian demonstrations with good humor.

Team Canada's problems, although anticipated to some degree, were complicated when their plane was almost an hour late leaving Helsinki for the 85-minute flight.

As a result, the aircraft was forced into a holding pattern for another half hour and the plane landed at the same time three large international flights arrived.

There were estimates that about 4000 persons were trying to use the airport facility at the same time.

Coach Billy Harris, as usual, refused to state his starting lineup for the game, but penalty-killing specialist Bruce MacGregor was a doubtful starter.

The right winger, who has been playing with Mike Walton and Paul Henderson, missed an exhibition game Friday in Helsinki because of a virus infection. He did not practise Saturday.

Goaltender Gerry Cheevers, although virtually certain to start, had an ailing groin muscle that might affect his lateral mobility. He aggravated the injury in Sunday's 4-3 victory over the Swedish national team.

He told one reporter the injury was bothering him, telling another that he was fine.

Defenceman J. C. Tremblay said Monday he is much improved from a minor tendon injury and expects to play. Tremblay and captain Pat Stapleton have been Canada's most effective defenders throughout the series.

The fifth game Thursday is also scheduled for 9:30 a.m. with the final two games of the series Saturday and Sunday, set for 8 a.m. Victoria time.

The games Thursday and Saturday will be televised in Canada over the CTV network with CBC handling the windup match Sunday.

In Sunday's game, Canada opened a first-period lead on goals by Bobby Hull, Walton and Gordie Howe, then coasted until Sweden tied the score.

Bjorn Johansonn beat Cheevers in the second period and Tord Lundstrom and Mats Ahlberg beat backup Don McLeod, 86 seconds apart in the third period.

Cheevers and McLeod finished with 30 saves, the same number as Holmvquist.

Los Angeles Dodgers will have to keep the champagne on ice for at least one more day.

The Dodgers could have captured the National League's West Division pennant with a victory Monday, but Houston pitchers Larry Dierker and Ken Forsch combined for a six-hitter and Astros downed the Dodgers, 4-1, at Houston.

Dierker, who allowed four hits before leaving after six innings because of a stiff arm, drove in the Astros' first run with a single in the fourth inning.

The Dodgers, didn't play Sunday, but they lost half a game of their lead, when Cincinnati Reds dropped the San Francisco Giants, 7-3, at Cincinnati, with Pete Rose and Johnny Bench leading the way.

St. Louis, which had moved into a tie for first place on Sunday, stayed ther Monday by stopping the Montreal Expos, 5-1, before a chilly crowd of 5337 at Montreal.

Temperatures were in the low 40s at Montreal, but that didn't seem to bother Bob Forsch, who held the Expos to three hits.

Lou Brock, didn't steal any bases, but he helped St. Louis regain a share of the lead by stealing his 118th base and driving in a run in the Cardinals' 7-3 win over Chicago on Sunday.

Pittsburgh, which managed only three hits in losing, 7-2 to New York Mets on Sunday, kept a share of first by edging the Cubs, 2-1, Monday at Pittsburgh.

Richie Zisk broke a 1-1 tie, with a triple in the seventh inning that scored Manny Sanguillen, who had singled.

Pittsburgh finishes the season at home against the Cubs, with games today and tomorrow. St. Louis' final two games are in Montreal today and tomorrow.

If a sudden-death playoff game is necessary it will be played Thursday at Pittsburgh.

Redskins rebound, Patriots top Rams

Washington Redskins were impressive enough Monday night, but their 30-3 romp over Denver Broncos didn't come close to measuring up to the exciting National Football League product on display Sunday.

Charley Taylor caught two touchdown passes from Billy Kilmer and Mark Moseley kicked tthree field goals as the Redskins bounced back from an upset loss in their previous start, but this was in the line of the expected.

It was different Sunday, a day on which New England Patriots and New York Giants succeeded, and San Diego Chargers and Houston Oilers just missed, in scoring major upsets. And there were a couple or three minor surprises as well to add interest to a season which has so far been featured by the unpredictable.

Patriots, who started the NFL world by opening the season with a 34-24 conquest of the defending-champion Miami Dolphins, indicated that may not have been quite the fluke supposed by besting the previously unbeaten Los Angeles Rams, 20-14.

It was the third win for the Patriots, who now share with St. Louis Cardinals and Minnesota Vikings the distinction of being unbeaten after three meeks, and it was accomplished before a wildly-excited crowd of 61,279 home fans.

The Rams won the statistical battle outside of the score, but the Patriots amde their 13 first downs and modest yardage take them a long way because of an alert defence and an opportunistic offence led by quarterback Jim Plunkett and Mack Herron, the stumpy running back who this year is an NFL sensation.

Patriots got only 98 yards from their rushing and 151 yards from their passing, but they returned kicks for 82 yards, recovered the ball three times on Los Angeles fumbles and made two interceptions. Plunkett tossed two touchdown passes, John Smith kicked two field goals and Herron got 62 yards in 16 carries and made a 38-yard punt return which set up a field goal.

Among other Sunday highlights —

● The Giants scored touchdowns 64 seconds apart in the second quarter, and sturdy defence, which intercepted three passes and sacked quarterback Roger Staubach six times, made them stand up for a 14-6 win to the chagrin of 46,353 booing Dallas fans;

● The Cardinals got three Browns. Norm Thompson 29-7 defeat of the Cleveland started them off by making a 56-yard touchdown run after an interception, then Terry Metcalf returned a punt 94 spectacular touchdowns in a yards for a major score and Mel Gray followed by collaborating with Jim Hart on a 68-yard touchdown;

Speaking briefly

JoAnne Carter sets record for earnings

JoAnne Carner has broken the single-season earnings record for women golfers, figures released Monday in New York by the Ladies Professional Golf Association show.

Mrs. Carner won her sixth tournament of the year in Portland during the weekend, bringing her official LPGA winnings for the year to $84,019, $2,000 more than Kathy Whitworth's 1973 record.

A former five-time U.S. amateur champion, Mrs. Carner had earned only $74,744 in her first three years on the women's pro tour.

Helped by an eagle on the seventh hole, Mrs. Carner finished with 71-211, three strokes ahead of Donna Caponi Young to earn $5,000. Sandra Haynie was third at 216. Canadian Jocelyne Bourassa had a final-round 72 for 227.

Skipper of India XI retires

Wadekar led India in 16 Test matches, winning four, losing four and drawing eight. His fame reached a peak when he triumphantly led the India side against England and the West Indies in 1971 and against the Marylebone Cricket Club of England in India in 1973. But his 1974 team lost all three test matches against England.

Wadekar completed 10,000 runs in first-class cricket. He was awarded the best fielder and the best batsman prize in England in 1971.

Yankees need boost from lowly Tigers

Ralph Houk probably has more Yankee fans rooting for him now than he ever did when he managed New York.

Houk and his Detroit Tigers are the only ones who can stop Baltimore Orioles from capturing the East Division pennant in the American League.

With two games remaining, the Orioles moved a full game ahead of the Yankees by blasting the last-place Tigers, 12-6, Monday at Detroit.

Bobby Grich and Earl Williams drove in three runs each as the Orioles collected a total of 16 hits, 12 of them in the first four innings and jumped to a 9-2 lead over the Tigers.

The Orioles play the Tigers today and Wednesday, while the Yankees, who were idle Monday, take on the Brewers at Milwaukee in their final two games.

Houk, who managed the Yankees for 10 seasons before resigning at the end of last season to take over the Tigers, and his Detroit squad have already played the spoiler role once in the pennant race.

On Sunday the Tigers mathematically eliminated Boston by dumping the Red Sox, 7-4, at Detroit, but it was only their third victory in their last 11 games.

The Orioles were hard-pressed to maintain their lead over the Yankees on Sunday.

Sparked by Graig Nettles 21st and 22nd home runs the Yankees routed Cleveland Indians, 10-0, but Baltimore sneaked by Milwaukee, 4-3.

Yankee mates clash

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Neither Gabe Paul, president of New York Yankees, nor manager Bill Virdon is concerned about their players' hotel lobby fistfight Sunday night. In fact, they're encouraged by it.

"Fights mean that a team is on edge," Paul said of the brief skirmish between catcher Rick Dempsey and utilityman Bill Sudakis which was settled after more than half a dozen teammates jumped in to cool them off.

Although both players blamed the tight pennant race, the delay of the trip and perhaps some excessive drinking for the heated tempers, observers said the fight was started by Sudakis' needling of Dempsey, who has appeared in 42 games this year and, with Thurman Munson behind the plate, hasn't played at all in the stretch drive.

Oak Bay ties unbeaten Reynolds

Esquimalt	7	0	7	0	13	24	0

Reynolds hung on through an Oak Bay rally in the final 15 minutes of the game and came away with a 1-1 tie in an Inter-high school soccer league game Monday at Oak Bay.

It was the first time the Roadrunners had failed to win and the third straight time they had been held to two goals or less. In their first four games the Roadrunners averaged six goals a game and allowed just one.

Reynolds had the better of the play in the first half, but excellent goalkeeping by Oak Bay's Scott McDonald helped the Bays emerge from the first half with a scoreless tie.

In other games Monday, Belmont Braves edged Esquimalt Dockers, 2-1, at Esquimalt; Vic High Tyees blanked the visiting Mt. Douglas Rams, 3-0; and Claremont Spartans and Parkland Panthers played to a 2-2 tie at Parkland.

At Vic High, the Tyees scored three times in the final 15 minutes and moved into fourth place in the standings. Ron McGovern, Charlie Davis and Henry Wong were the scorers.

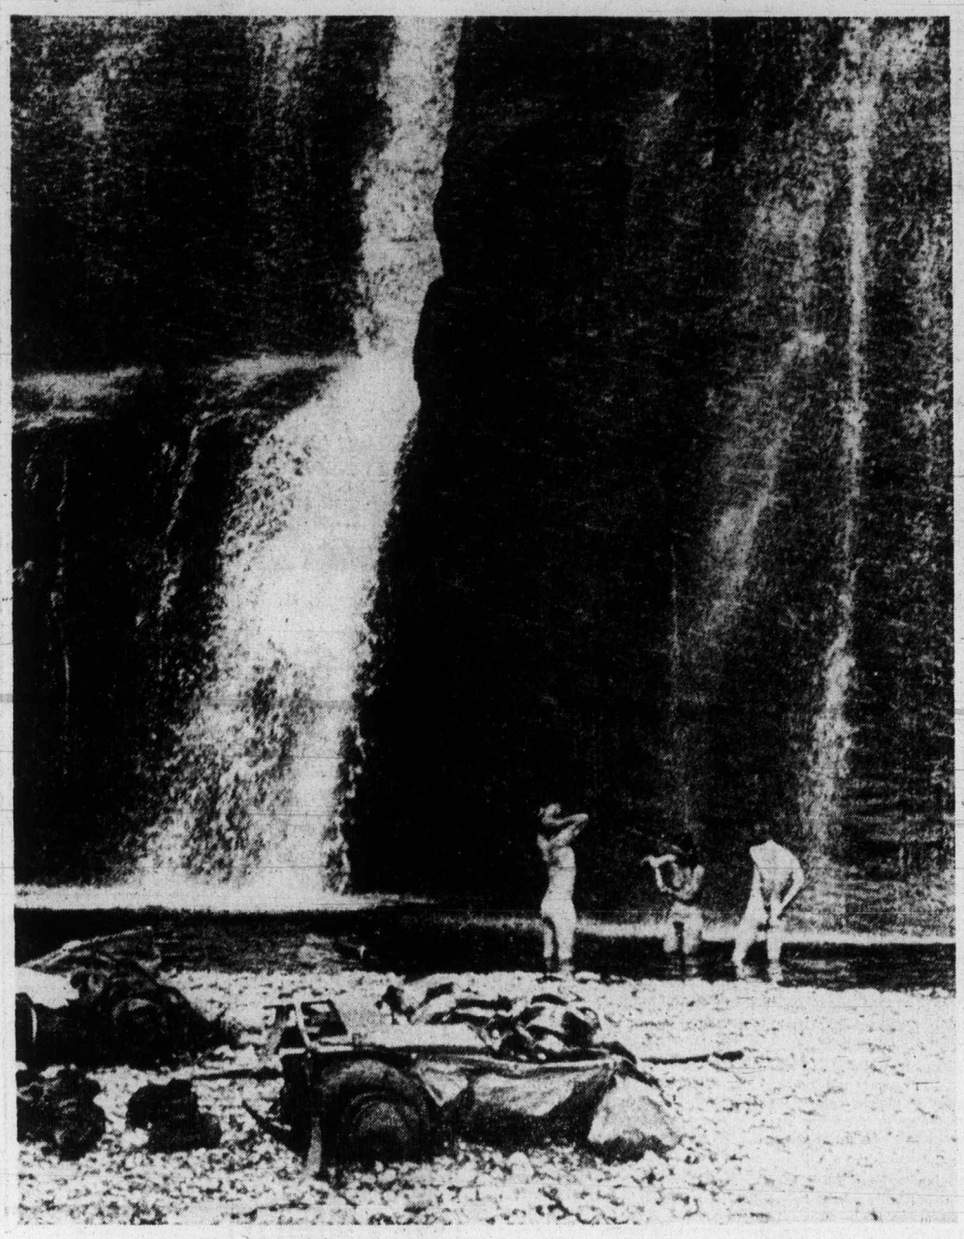

At Claremont, Mike Nosse scored at 30 minutes of the second half to give Parkland the tie. Rudy Henry had put Parkland ahead in the first half, but the Spartans came back with goals by Dave Scotney and Doug Burns.

For a fascinating hike take West Coast Trail

By JOHN LANGTON
Colonist Correspondent

QUALICUM BEACH — The West Coast Trail is one of the most fascinating parts of Vancouver Island.

And this past summer I set off for my second hike along it.

As the trail is 44 miles long, with no stores or roads, it was necessary to pack in 10 days food supply, so there would be no need to rush the trip.

After using the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway to get to Shawnigan Lake, and getting a lift in a pickup truck, I arrived at the Indian reserve just outside Port Renfrew.

By now it was late evening and after crossing Jordan River, the first night's camp was made just a few hundred yards up the trail.

Next morning I started some hard slogging through dense rain forest and by day's end had made a little more than five miles. It seems little is done to maintain the condition of the trail, as many trees have fallen across it, and hikers have a tough time.

In places, the trail crosses very boggy ground and hikers are well advised to be sure they have good, high, hiking boots with them.

After a day of wonderful views along higher parts of the trail, camp was made for the night at 150 Mile Creek where there is a small campsite.

Next day turned out to be hot and humid and it was a warm job crossing four deep river valleys and dense bushland.

Camp that night was at Logan Creek and an evening was spent around a campfire with other hikers met along the way.

At one point there is a very hazardous section. A waterfall comes down the cliff and into a sea chasm which is a wide, deep rift in the rock shelf.

The day was spent hiking along the beach until arrival at Carmanah Point where I climbed up to the lighthouse.

The Indian cemetery near the suspension bridge over the Cheewhat River is well worth exploring, I found, and so is the remains of a deserted settlement there.

Next stop that day was at Whyac at the Nitinat Narrows. Here there are very strong currents and it is necessary to ask one of the Indians at the reserve to ferry hikers across.

An hour's hike from here brought me to the beach near Tsuquadra Point where I spent the night. This day saw only seven miles covered but this was one of the most interesting parts of the entire trail.

Early next morning I enjoyed a casual ramble along the trail to Tsusiat Point where there is a huge stone arch with one side on the beach and the other on a small islet in the sea. From there it was on to Tsusiat Falls.

Langton examines plants along trail

Next morning, hiking along the beach seemed to be ideal and I spent quite some time peering at marine life in tidal pools along the way. Also during my prowls, I discovered some pieces of early shipwrecks, and in one place found an old anchor propped against a rock.

Getting along, I waded the Darling River and stepped from one stone to another in crossing the Michigan River.

About mid-day I arrived at Pachenas lighthouse and chatted with the two attendants. It was a calm sea that day and someone paddled by in a kayak. At that point, it seemed that might be an easier way of seeing the coastline than hiking the trail.

The last five miles of the trail is broad, well-maintained and rather uninteresting compared with the earlier portion.

Body four miles from home

Youngster was dead before hunt began

The naken body of a lost child was found Sunday afternoon after a six-day search in rugged bushland west of Shawnigan Lake.

Two-year-old Yehudi Prior apparently died of fatigue and cold the night of Monday, Sept. 23, before an all-out search got underway, according to searchmaster Hal Orrick.

His body was found about four miles from where he went missing in an area not previously searched because it was thought a young child would not have travelled so far.

"We were told Saturday night (Sept. 28) that he might have wandered off earlier than we had previously heard," said Orrick, "and that is why we widened the search area.

"He had wandered off over a small ridge into the next valley and headed down to Holt Creek, perhaps thinking it was Wild Deer Creek where he lived.

"There were footprints on the logging road near where we found him, and if we had been called in Monday afternoon when he was first missed, I would have driven in that way and might have seen him on the road.

"I've been involved in this kind of thing for years, but I suppose you never get hardened to a thing like finding a baby's body."

As many as 60 volunteers and five tracker dogs combed the dense bush of Wild Deer Creek at the height of the search last week.

It was a final effort by about 20 searchers, many from Nanaimo, which recovered the body beside Holt Creek on Sunday.

Prior had reported his son missing to Shawnigan RCMP about 5 p.m. Monday Sept. 23, saying the child had been missing since about 3 p.m. He said he would search the area himself before asking for assistance.

Prior returned to police the following afternoon and the search operation began then.

An autopsy is to be conducted and an inquest held but no date has been set.

Flames engulf tanker truck in which fire started

Sparks flying in Victoria over rail bid

By HUBERT BEYER
Colonist Reporter

Charges of "grandstanding and cheap politics" were levelled Monday at Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen by Ald. Malcolm Anderson.

The disagreement between Pollen and Anderson is over whether Victoria city council should oppose an application by Canadian Pacific to discontinue its passenger rail service between Victoria and Courtenay on Vancouver Island.

Anderson said in an interview Monday the mayor's determination to fight the application was "a cheap shot" but Pollen countered in a separate interview that Anderson doesn't know what he's talking about.

Anderson said if CP could no longer operate the service on an economical basis, it should be allowed to discontinue the run.

He said the service was hardly used by anyone, "except by some Indians who can travel at half-price." He added that, perhaps, "the odd body is brought to Victoria on the train."

Anderson stressed that scrapping the passenger run didn't necessarily mean losing the right-of-way. But even if that were the case, Anderson said, it wouldn't be disastrous.

There would never be a need for a commuter service to Victoria that might make the right-of-way a desirable feature.

"The regional plan shoots that down. According to the regional plan, Victoria will eventually have a population of 300,000 and you don't need a commuter service for 300,000 people," he said.

Anderson accused Pollen of exercising a double standard with regard to transportation. He pointed out that city council "just barely" supported an application by Air West Airlines Ltd., to extend its passenger flight service between Victoria and Seattle.

"Council can't continue to speak with forked tongue when it comes to transportation. We are either for transportation or against it," he said.

Angered by Anderson's stand, Pollen said the alderman "doesn't know what he's talking about."

"The gradual erosion of our railway services is a real tragedy," the mayor said.

Gasoline tanker inferno at Courtenay

COURTENAY — One person suffered burns to his face and hands in a fire Saturday at the Co-Op Petroleum Services plant on the Island Highway just north of the city.

Two foam trucks were rushed to the scene from the Comox airbase. Two members of the CFB Comox fire department who donned asbestos suits and entered the blazing inferno to switch off the main valves leading to eight nearby storage tanks, are credited with making sure the fire did not spread to the tanks.

Because of the danger of explosion, RCMP and members of neighboring fire departments closed the highway — only link between Campbell River and Courtenay — to traffic for about 75 minutes.

A thick pall of black smoke could be seen for a considerable distance as firemen fought the blaze. They were at the scene for about four hours.

Don Griffith, plant operator, was rushed to St. Joseph's Hospital in Comox by ambulance with burns to his hands and face. He was given outpatient treatment and returned to the scene.

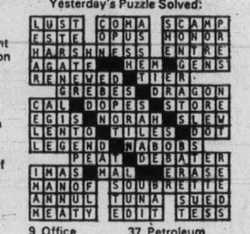

He told Fire Chief Lawrence Burns he had filled two compartments of the tanker with gasoline and was moving the vehicle ahead to fill a third compartment when the vehicle became engulfed in flames.

Burns said that gasoline spillage around the rear of the truck must have caused the flash fire.

200 Indians storm Parliament

Fierce battle disrupts ceremony

Honor guard fixes its bayonets

Both attempts failed but each time the Mounties and the Indians exchanged punches. There were numerous tussles on the ground; sticks, bricks and placards flew through the air.

Ottawa city police said Monday night that seven demonstrators had been charged with obstructing and assaulting police. Eighteen people originally detained had been released but "possibly more charges will be laid," a police spokesman said. He said three RCMP officers and possibly one demonstrator were injured.

Between the two clashes the Indians burned a Maple Leaf

By STEPHEN SCOTT

OTTAWA (CP) — The government will make a down-payment this session of Parliament on some of the promises it made during the July federal election campaign.

Indications are that the part of the promises that voters will see this session will be those that cost the least.

The throne speech read at the opening of Parliament Monday said that as far as new initiatives are concerned the government "will be conscious of the need for restraint and careful phasing in relation to the state of the economy."

In other words, don't look for government money pouring into a "superbus" for inter-city transportation or for that exclusive, tourist-oriented train that would chug across the country in daylight hours only.

Both came up in the election campaign with promises of subsidies and other forms of help in housing, only some of which will see the light of day in the relatively near future.

During the election campaign the Liberals made major promises in the area of housing, transport, old-age pensions, consumer protection

By JIM HUME
Colonist Reporter

The budget for the first year of operation of the newly created B.C. Assessment Authority has been set at $6.6 million, roughly $2.6 million higher than originally anticipated.

When legislation creating the authority was approved, an outright grant of $1.5 million each year for five years, and a grant equivalent to one tenth of a mill of the total value of all taxable assessed property in the province (approximately $2.5 million), was regarded as adequate financing.

An order-in-council issued Monday lists $5.7 million as the budget for assessment and clerical staffs, $875,000 for other office staff and $32,000 for accommodation and furnishings.

But whatever the budget it won't eliminate the headaches now facing the new organization.

Those problems begin officially today as Assessment Commissioner Percy Wright awaits replies to invitations to all municipal assessors throughout the province to join his staff.

Wright said he was hopeful that most municipal assessors would reply quickly and in the affirmative, but added that there would be problems in many smaller municipalities where assessors do double-duty in the municipal structure.

Joe Antalek, clerk-assessor of Pitt Meadows (pop. 4,000) near Haney, is typical of the small-town administrator now facing a crossroads in his career: Should he become one of 700 staff members working for the assessment authority? Or should he quietly decline Wright's invitation and remain with Pitt Meadows as clerk?

"I just don't know what I'm going to do," Antalek said in a telephone interview Monday, "and I don't suppose I'm alone. It's really the same old story of a government introducing legislation before studying the ramifications."

Legislation too soon

In the past, Antalek, like other small community clerk assessors, has brought his assessment roll as up to date as possible by "working till midnight every day in late November or early December."

This year he has called bids from firms of private appraisers and now has a low bid to send to the assessment authority, hopefully for approval.

"But even that creates problems for us," he said. "Like who will defend us at the court of revision? If there are only a few appeals, I guess I could maybe handle it. But if there are 200 or so, and there could be with assessments going to 100 per cent of true market value, I just don't know what we'll do."

Wright agrees that Antalek is not alone.

"I'm afraid the same situation will exist in most small communities like Pitt Meadows, Comox, Enderby, Armstrong, Greenwood and Fernie," Wright said. "There are many others, but these are all small communities where the assessor plays a double and sometimes triple role."

But while the smaller municipalities are going to be hit hardest as they have to find either a new assessor or a new municipal clerk before year-end, cities like Victoria have to gear for some juggling, too.

City assessor Jack Ozard noted that of the 11 members in the city's assessment department, eight were fairly solidly committed to joining the provincial authority.

"There will be some problems," Ozard said. "We have positions in city hall designated assessor-collector. That's where a man is both in charge of assessment rolls and in charge of collection rolls. Obviously, if he joins the assessment authority, the city will need someone to assume the collection duties."

Conversely, if the city employee decides to stay with the city as a collector, the assessment authority will have to find another assessor to make up the complement of trained appraisers required to handle the assessment load.

City Manager James Bramley said he didn't anticipate any major problems in the switch-over, officially scheduled for today but now anticipated by month-end.

Cyprus backlash

Senators vote no Turkey aid

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate voted Monday to cut off military aid to Turkey, but killed an attempt to ban all U.S. aid to the world's exporting countries.

The Senate approved an amendment by Sen. Thomas Eagleton, Missouri Democrat, that would prohibit aid to any country using U.S. weapons in violation of laws governing their use. The Senate was reacting to Turkey's invasion of Cyprus.

Earlier the Senate, by 46 to 33, killed an amendment by Sen. Frank Church, Idaho Democrat, to deny any aid to the oil-exporting countries in retaliation for huge oil price increases set by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

The Eagleton amendment to the pending continuing resolution on foreign aid won overwhelming approval despite arguments by Democratic leader Mike Mansfield that the Senate should not interfere with Cyprus negotiations being undertaken by Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

"The secretary has been warned," Eagleton said, "that the letter and the spirit of American law require an immediate cutoff of military assistance to Turkey, which more than two months ago violated its bilateral arms agreement with the United States by using American weapons to intervene in Cyprus."

Grain companies reject Munro

VANCOUVER (CP)—A legislated settlement of the Vancouver grain handlers strike appeared certain today after elevator companies rejected Monday the latest settlement proposal by Labor Minister John Munro.

The government said in its throne speech that legislation would be passed to ensure movement of grain if the parties did not resolve the dispute.

Munro sent telegrams to the five elevator companies and the 550-member local 333 of the Grain Workers Union outlining two proposals that might end the dispute which has lingered since Aug. 26.

Union business agent Henry Kancs said the union accepted the proposals but R. W. Mead, chief negotiator for the companies, rejected them.

Mead said the proposal is the same as the companies rejected two weeks ago and an end to the strike "will have to be legislated."

Munro said only two items in the conciliation report by Dr. Neil Perry of Victoria remain in dispute—a cost-of-living allowance and pension proposals.

Munro suggested the pension issue might be resolved on the basis of company contributions of 25 cents per man-hour worked plus $20,000 to be made by the firms into a pension fund annually in 1974 to 1978 inclusive.

The cost-of-living allowances should be based on the Perry report with an understanding between the parties that overlapping of adjustments would be avoided, the minister said.

Mead said the companies accepted the pension proposals but don't want the cost-of-living clause to go into effect until next year.

Slight signs of cancer

WASHINGTON (UPI) Betty Ford's doctors reported Monday they found slight traces of cancer cells in the president's wife's lymph tissue, but said there was no clinical evidence the disease had spread further.

The surgeons said they remain optimistic for Mrs. Ford's "prolonged survival."

Throne speech lacks surprises

Government spending will keep low profile

OTTAWA (CP) — With well-rehearsed ceremonial rituals Parliament opened Monday and heard that the government plans to restrain its spending in the battle against inflation.

The throne speech opening the new Parliament acknowledged inflation to be a "serious and urgent" problem.

Long after Prime Minister Trudeau had said inflation had been licked, the speech made it clear that the main battle lies ahead.

"For its part, the government will exercise restraint in its own expenditures with particular emphasis on improving effectiveness and efficiency in its existing operation . . ."

But "the government does not intend deliberately to generate slack in the economy in order to combat inflation."

Conservative leader Robert Stanfield said "there was really nothing surprising in the speech from the throne" except that inflation now seems to be recognized as a major problem by the Liberal government.

Detailed stories Pages 2, 10

Ed Broadbent, New Democratic Party parliamentary leader, said there are indications the government may follow a deflationary policy, despite its explicit promise not to generate slack in the economy.

Social Credit leader Real Caouette said he has heard 16 throne speeches and Monday's seemed "an exact copy" of the first one.

The speech, read by Chief Justice Bora Laskin, indicated a heavy schedule of federal-provincial meetings, and consultations with labor, management, the professions, farmers and other segments of society as the government launches a co-operative attack on inflation.

"The government does intend to ask all Canadians to join with it in a co-operative effort to achieve by non-inflationary means an equitable sharing among all groups in the community of the fruits of our productive efforts.

"Canada has thus far suffered less from inflation than most other countries, but the problem is serious and urgent."

By DON GAIN
Colonist Reporter

Jeremy Tatum thinks Saanich police will have problems in applying a new bylaw that allows them to shoot Japanese starlings and magpies.

Main problem, he says, is that there aren't any on Vancouver Island.

Tatum, a professional astronomer who is past president of Victoria Natural History Society, takes exception to police killing any birds, even ones that don't exist here.

"If some are in competition with man, attacking agriculture or presenting a danger to aircraft, that's another story," he says.

But he's concerned about Saanich aldermen "passing legislation on things they know nothing whatever about."

Tatum says their ignorance is obvious because the new bylaw allows police — or property owners with official permission — to shoot Japanese starlings and magpies, along with English sparrows, crows and English starlings.

What made them decide that? he wants to know. Did they study the bird population?

Tatum says he doubts the worth of the bylaw, since there is in fact no such thing as a Japanese starling, although sometimes the name is given to the crested mynah, which has never been spotted in this area. And he says there are no records of magpies on Vancouver Island, either.

Child dead before hunt got started

Gorst
. . . $97,000 cheque

The naked body of a lost child was found Sunday afternoon after a six-day search in rugged bushland west of Shawnigan Lake.

Two-year-old Yehudi Prior apparently died of fatigue and cold the night of Monday, Sept. 23, before an all-out search got underway, according to searchmaster Hal Orrick.

His body was found about four miles from where he went missing in an area not previously searched because it was thought a young child would not have travelled so far.

"We were told Saturday night (Sept. 28) that he might have wandered off earlier than we had previously heard," said Orrick, "and that is why we widened the search area.

"He had wandered off over a small ridge into the next valley and headed down to Holt Creek, perhaps thinking it was Wild Deer Creek where he lived.

"There were footprints on the logging road near where we found him, and if we had been called in Monday afternoon when he was first missed, I would have driven in that way and might have seen him on the road.

"I've been involved in this kind of thing for years, but I suppose you never get hardened to a thing like finding a baby's body."

As many as 60 volunteers and five tracker dogs combed the dense bush of Wild Deer Creek at the height of the search last week.

It was a final effort by about 20 searchers, many from Nanaimo, which recovered the body beside Holt Creek on Sunday.

Prior had reported his son missing to Shawnigan RCMP about 5 p.m. Monday Sept. 23, saying the child had been missing since about 3 p.m. He said he would search the area himself before asking for assistance.

Nature centre helped

Saanich municipality received a provincial government cheque for $97,000 Monday from Esquimalt MLA James Gorst to buy land for the Swan Lake-Christmas Hill nature centre.

In making the presentation, Gorst complimented the B.C. Land Commission which, he said, recommended purchase of the land.

Additional funds for the centre are expected to come from the provincial government's Green Belt Fund and the federal government's Nature Second Century Fund.

The centre will contain 175 acres, of which 21 are taken up by Swan Lake. Saanich has bought 54 acres and will buy another 21. The Greater Victoria school board has agreed in principle to provide 8.18 and the rest will be bought with funds either received or yet to come.

So much for drive-in garage

Moral: Do it yourself

A helping hand on moving day

It was dark and somewhat damp Monday night in the Morin house, 2748 Prior, Victoria, and the problem couldn't be solved without danger of the house falling down.

Arthur Morin was expecting a moving van to come and pick up a piece of furniture from the basement. A young friend (who prefers to be nameless) volunteered to move a car out of the way in the driveway to the drive-in garage.

Somehow the car got out of control, shot into and through the basement, and halfway through the far wall.

The moving van came and got the furniture—after the water had been turned off from the broken main.

Morin plans to have the house shored up today so the car can be moved and necessary repairs carried out.

Government asked to cut spending

Senior citizens criticize over-run

Senior citizens on fixed incomes will be driven out of their homes unless municipalities cut spending to the minimum, an Oak Bay woman warned Monday night.

Many elderly persons are having trouble meeting steadily-increasing property taxes, and municipal spending should be cut to the "bare essentials," Jane Hall, 356 Newport, told about 100 people at a town hall meeting sponsored by Oak Bay council.

She criticized the provincial government for allowing a $100 million over-run in the human resources department and said the Oak Bay share of the extra cost, which one alderman estimated could amount to about $80,000, would be hard to raise.

"Oak Bay doesn't have that kind of cash," she said.

After she complained that the cost of the recreational complex now under construction was a "pretty hefty load to carry," Ald. Doug Watts explained that Oak Bay will have to cover only $1.2 million of the $3 million total cost. The rest of the money will be provided by the provincial and federal governments.

The complex is expected to open next year, and Mayor Brian Smith told the meeting it will probably operate at a loss.

However, he added, the provincial government is "more than generous" with recreational grants and has indicated that operating grants might be available.

Miss Hall also had some unkind words for the Canadian Union of Public Employees which unsuccessfully asked council for a mid-contract $100 a month across-the-board raise.

"I, for one am not one to accede to the requests of unions and get forced from my home," she said.

She asked when all Greater Victoria municipalities will begin regional bargaining with CUPE and other unions and was told by Smith that the municipalities have agreed in principle to the proposal.

Regional bargaining would end "blackmail settlements," the mayor said.

City's PR campaign to sell mall plans

Wednesday is Sell-the-Mall Day.

To dispel any doubts about desirability of the proposed Government Street semi-pedestrian mall, Victoria city council is starting an elaborate public relations campaign.

Throughout the day, information sessions will be conducted by the city's planning, engineering and traffic departments.

The first meeting will start at 9:30 a.m. in the city hall council chamber. There will be slides showing the concept, drawings of how the traffic will be handled and, most of all, the city's technical personnel will answer questions.

There will be three or four sessions during the day. Each one will deal with a particular section of the proposed mall and merchants and property owners in that section have been invited to attend the sessions.

At night, starting at 7:30, there will be, according to Ald. Michael Young, "a free-for-all" session which the public is invited to attend.

Young said the information sessions wouldn't have political overtones.

"In other words, it's not going to be an 'ask-your-favorite-alderman' affair," Young said in an interview Monday.

He said city staff would be able to answer all the questions people ever wanted to know but were afraid to ask about the proposed mall.

"There will be detailed drawings showing where the loading bays will be. The plans will show where we'll plant the trees and where we'll put the planters," he said.

Young stressed again that the information sessions wouldn't be a politically-motivated "sell meetings." He added that approval of property owners wasn't necessary because the city was paying for all the work, estimated to cost close to $1 million.

The proposed mall is to stretch along government from Humboldt to Yates. Existing sidewalks will be doubled in width, reducing the four traffic lanes to two.

Trees will be planted on both sides of Government and benches and planters will be installed.

Council has abandoned the original concept of building an informal mall or, as Young put it," a country-in-the-middle-of-town type of mall."

Plans call instead for a more dignified mall "with shapely, manicured trees," Young said.

Some opposition to the proposed mall has come from segments of the business community. The Downtown Victoria Association and the Downtown Business Association have urged council to shelve the mall proposal for several months.

Both groups have warned that the mall would displace existing parking and cause traffic congestion in the downtown area, all of which would have detrimental effects on downtown merchants.

But the aldermen have replied that these objections should have been voiced a year ago when the mall concept was first announced.

King
. . . sees action

Elevator firms' 'no' concern to King

Labor Minister William King said Monday he was concerned over the stand taken by the companies in the elevator workers' dispute.

King indicated the companies had told him they did not intend to accept the recommendations of an industrial inquiries commission concerning the dispute.

"I view this," King said, "as a violation of the companies' written commitment to me. I am disappointed that they appear prepared to violate that commitment.

"The government will have to consider whatever action may be necessary unless the companies review their position."

If Dayliner's losing close it—alderman

By HUBERT BEYER
Colonist Reporter

Charges of "grandstanding and cheap politics" were levelled Monday at Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen by Ald. Malcolm Anderson.

The disagreement between Pollen and Anderson is over whether Victoria city council should oppose an application by Canadian Pacific to discontinue its passenger rail service between Victoria and Courtenay on Vancouver Island.

Anderson said in an interview Monday the mayor's determination to fight the application was "a cheap shot" but Pollen countered in a separate interview that Anderson doesn't know what he's talking about.

Anderson said if CP could no longer operate the service on an economical basis, it should be allowed to discontinue the run.

He said the service was hardly used by anyone, "except by some Indians who can travel at half-price."

Anderson stressed that scrapping the passenger run didn't necessarily mean losing the right-of-way. But even if that were the case, Anderson said, it wouldn't be disastrous.

There would never be a need for a commuter service to Victoria that might make the right-of-way a desirable feature.

"The regional plan shoots that down. According to the regional plan, Victoria will eventually have a population of 300,000 and you don't need a commuter service for 300,000 people," he said.

Anderson accused Pollen of exercising a double standard with regard to transportation. He pointed out that city council "just barely" supported an application by Air West Airlines Ltd., to extend its passenger flight service between Victoria and Seattle.

"Council can't continue to speak with forked tongue when it comes to transportation. We are either for transportation or against it," he said.

Angered by Anderson's stand, Pollen said the alderman "doesn't know what he's talking about.

"The city is simply trying to make CP fulfill its obligations to the community of Vancouver Island," he said.

Was it or not? Only the pilot knows for sure

Did you see an apparent UFO Monday night — something displaying a pulsating red light as it flew over Saanich Peninsula, not too fast?

Many did, and deluged radio stations, newspapers and even Pacific Rescue Centre with telephone queries.

Said a centre spokesman:

"We didn't see it. Anyway, while conceding it's interesting, we would only be concerned if the UFO were in trouble and asked for our help."

"Many small aircraft," a spokesman there said, "now carry a rotating red light mounted on the plane's tail for added visibility at night, in addition to their wingtip lights.

"One of these was up Monday night, and apparently switched on the rotating light, forgetting for a time to put on its wingtip lights. We're sure that's what people saw. When the pilot realized all his lights were not on, he soon added the wingtip illumination."

Region may take over water supply control

Capital Region Board chairman James Campbell told a Sidney public meeting monday night that water supply will probably soon come under control of the regional board.

He told an audience of about 50 that the regional board now does not have jurisdiction in supplying fresh water to municipalities in the region.

Campbell hinted the board would only get control if municipal councils passed the board's regional plan for development and growth of the entire area.

Sidney Mayor Stanley Dear said the cost of bringing Sooke Lake water to Sidney will be between $4 and $6 million.

Dear also told the meeting, sponsored by town council to explain the plan, that all members of his council had "expressed misgivings" about it.

Dear said council feared that, if the regional plan was adopted, council would lose its autonomy. He also told the meeting that Sidney could not afford to bring Sooke Lake water to the town and foot the bill on its own.

Campbell suggested Sidney council vote to have the regional plan adopted, then lay the responsibility for the supply of fresh water on the region as a whole.

New building in the town has been virtually frozen for the past year because of the limited amount of water.

Campbell told the meeting the regional plan is "simply setting guidelines" for orderly growth in the Capital Region and does not take away the autonomy of councils.

He said it was "an open ended affair" and the projected growth of the region to the year 2001 is subject to review every five years.

Gorden Head residents:

A flat No to flats

Apartments and townhouses are not wanted by residents in the Gordon Head district, according to a mail survey done by the Gordon Head Ratepayers' Association.

Preliminary results of the survey, released Monday by association president Barrie Goult, showed that 80 per cent of the 733 replies did not consider apartments an "acceptable land use" in Gordon Head, even if they are "well-designed and properly located."

Only 13 per cent did not object to apartments and 7 per cent had no opinion.

Townhouses were considered acceptable by only 21 per cent, with 75 per cent opposed and 4 per cent with no opinion.

Duplexes, however, were not quite so objectionable — 50 per cent of those answering the questionnaire considered them acceptable, compared with 45 per cent against them and 5 per cent with no opinion.

Goult said the survey results — which are being sent to Saanich council — clearly indicate "the people of Gordon Head want to retain the amenities they're used to."

Most residents moved into the district because it was an area of single-family homes, Goult added, and apparently a large majority want to see it remain that way.

He said the survey was distributed in August to most households in Gordon Head, including homes, apartments and townhouses.

Cyclist Kelly Hubman, 950 Edge, in Saanich, was in collision Monday afternoon with a vehicle driven by Arthur Reedy, 660 Jones, at the intersection of Interurban and Marigold.

Foster move confirmed

Dr. Bristol Foster confirmed Monday night that he will be leaving his position as director of the Provincial Museum in Victoria to head the province's new Ecological Reserves Program.

The program was established by the Legislature in 1971 to set up as many as 100 reserves in B.C. by 1975 to protect areas that are still largely untouched by man.

Foster said 55 of the reserves have already been established, the largest being 23,000 acres on the west coast of the Queen Charlotte Islands. Many more are under study.
